Admission free for 5th Annual Original Festival

By Robin Jordan

The Original Festival, a 2-day extravaganza featuring a stellar lineup of alternative bands performing on 2 stages, art, merchandise and food vendors, returns to the Original Mine Yard for the 5th year Friday and Saturday, September 8 and 9—and this year, admission is free.

Matt Boyle, festival organizer, said the decision to make the festival free this year came about only recently, due in part to the success of marketing and fundraising efforts, particularly through social media.

One of Boyle's more creative fundraising efforts was a basketball free throw event in which he volunteered to shoot a free throw for every $1 donated through his GoFundMe page. The 12-hour event was held at the Knights of Columbus gym and streamed live on Facebook last April. Donations poured in and Boyle shot more than 5,000 free throws, eventually raising $5,536.

Boyle, a former high-school basketball player, said the event was grueling, but many supporters dropped by the K of C to make donations in person and even to bring ointment and heating pads to help him in his effort. The effort brought the needed attention to his GoFundMe page, which eventually raised $14,000 in donations for the Original Festival

Boyle said thanks to the donations, festival sponsorships and a $12,000 grant from the Superfund Advisory and Redevelopment Trust Authority, he realized that more than half the festival budget for this year was covered, so he decided to offer free admission for the first time.

"I wanted to be able to offer the festival to everyone," he said. "I'm eager to see the reaction from new people who've never been able to go before, and of course, our returning fans."

Boyle said alternative music fans will have plenty to choose from, with live acts performing on two stages at the Original Mine Yard from 5-11 p.m. Friday and 3-11 p.m. Saturday. More bands will play at after-parties both nights at the Silver Dollar Saloon and The Times.

"Friday, we have all kinds of rock bands—indie, punk, surf, you name it," he said. "Saturday, there's reggae, hip-hop and electronic. There's something for everyone."

Some of the bands playing at the festival include Herobust, LAXX, Cloud Nothings, Twin Peaks, and Epic Beard Men. The after-parties will feature Bear Grillz, TrollPhace, Phase One, Ty-Alex and more. Admission to each of the after-parties is $10.

Although fans have been flocking to Butte for the Original Festival for 5 years now, Boyle said the idea of starting an alternative rock festival came to him a few years before that.

"I actually got the idea the second year Butte hosted the National Folk Festival," Boyle said. "I sent a message to George Everett, the

Campfires Prohibited Due To Fire Restrictions

Interagency fire management officials in southwestern Montana will amend Stage 1 fire restrictions, effective at midnight on September 2, 2017. Until now, there were exemptions for campfires to be allowed within metal rings; this amendment now prohibits all campfires. Campfires will not be allowed in metal rings or at developed recreation sites, including campgrounds or cabins. These restrictions apply to the following areas: Madison County, Beaverhead County, Deer Lodge County, Silver Bow County, Jefferson County and Powell County. Granite County is currently under Stage 2 Restrictions.

These fire restrictions affect private lands within the listed counties; state and private forested lands under the jurisdiction of Montana Department of Natural Resources & Conservation (MT DNRC); and lands under the jurisdiction of Bureau of Land Management (BLM), Forest Service (FS), US Fish & Wildlife Service (USFWS) and the National Park Service (NPS)

Stage 1 fire restrictions apply to campfires and smoking. Under Stage 1 restrictions, the following acts are prohibited:

1. Building, maintaining, attending, or using a fire or campfire.

2. Smoking, except within an enclosed vehicle or building, a developed recreation site or while stopped in an area at least three feet in diameter that is barren or cleared of all flammable materials.

Exemptions to the above Stage 1 prohibitions include the following:

- Persons with a written permit that specifically authorizes the otherwise prohibited act.
- Persons using a device solely fueled by liquid petroleum or LPG fuels that can be turned on and off. Such devices can only be used in an area that is barren or cleared of all overhead and surrounding flammable materials within 3 feet of the device.
- Persons conducting activities in those designated areas where the activity is specifically authorized by written posted notice.
- Any Federal, State, or local officer or member of an organized rescue or firefighting force in the performance of an official duty.
- Other exemptions unique to each agency/tribe.

Game days won't be the same without Coach Vez

By Bill Foley

On the last Saturday of the 2015 college football regular season, Montana Tech played Montana Western with the Frontier Conference title hanging in the balance at Alumni Coliseum, and I was running late.

When the Orediggers and Bulldogs meet, you want to be there early if you want a parking space, and I was sitting at home, staring at my phone.

"C'mon, Vez, where are you?" I said. "C'mon, Vez."

But I never heard from Vez, so I eventually had to leave without him.

A couple of years earlier, I was lucky enough to find my way onto Steve Vezina's Game Day phone list. The goofball assistant coach for the Beaverhead County High School Beavers would recite a poem or change the lyrics as he sang along with a popular song, describing the ways his Western Bulldogs were going to completely destroy the competition.

He changed the words of songs by Taylor Swift, Meghan Trainor and Jon Bon Jovi. He sang "Rockin' Rocky" to the beat of the classic song "Rockin' Robin."

He even put a twist on a John Denver song, singing "Thank God I'm a Doggie Boy."

His songs and poems were meant to make everyone laugh while also motivating the football players of his beloved alma mater, and boy could Vez motivate.

At the end of every song or poem, Vez would pause and say, "Game Day. Go Dawgs."

Once I figured out how get them from my flip phone to YouTube, I started posting them on Facebook because I thought all the world needed to hear Vez's Game Days. They were that good. Some were so bad that they were really, really good.

So, I could not wait to hear what Vez had to say about the biggest Tech-Western game in ages. I wanted to get it online before kickoff. But the Game Day never came, and I was nervous.

Vez was already living on borrowed time. For two years prior, he had been fighting a form of cancer that should have killed him after 6 months.

Someday, I knew I was going to get a call or a text giving me the really bad news. I was relieved to find out that wasn't the day.

I saw Vez a few days after the game when I went to St. James Healthcare to hang out with him while he went through a chemotherapy treatment.

"What the heck?" I said. "The biggest game of the year, and you don't do a Game Day?"

It turns out that Vez did one, and it was great. He just didn't want me to put it online. He didn't want to come across as being disrespectful to the players, coaches and fans of the Orediggers.

The Game Day joke was for the Bulldog fans and players. It was never meant to hurt.

So, Vez played me his Game Day parody of Jimmy Dean's "Big Bad John" for the Tech-Western game, and I laughed so hard that I cried. It was just so Vez.

When I wrote about him coaching the 2014 Montana East-West Shrine Game despite undergoing intense chemo treatments during game week, I joked that Vez is one of the top 10 people to ever live.

He's "probably No. 5 or 6," I wrote. "With a bullet."

The truth is, that was selling Vez short. Simply put, there is nobody ranked ahead of Steve Vezina. There is no way a man or woman has ever been better than him. A tie for first, maybe, but never better.

Vez was animated in life and even more so on the football field.

The first time I covered his Beavers winning a state championship game in Dillon, a Dillon player broke a punt return for a 60- or 70-yard touchdown.

I don't remember which player it was, but I remember Vez raising his hands to signal touchdown before the player got to the 50 yard line.

Since the returner still needed to make a few of nice cuts after Vez called it a score, I figured the coach really knew what he was doing. He saw the field, knew the blocking scheme, and he could tell it was a touchdown.

It turned that was just what Vez always did that. He led the world in premature touchdown signals. This was just one of the many times when the Beavers made him look good, even when he was wearing shorts with the temperature well below freezing.

Vez always wore shorts, even in a snowstorm.

During one particularly cold Dillon game, Vez let me in on his secret as I shivered while standing by the sideline heater.

Vez wasn't wearing the shorts because he was crazy. He was doing it to help give his players a mental edge.

If they saw that the coach was in shorts, Vez figured, then they might not get caught up in how cold it was outside. That way they could just focus on football.

Western had lost five out of six games, falling to 2-5 heading into a home game against Eastern Oregon. Coach B.J. Robertson brought Vezina in to deliver a motivational message in person.

Of course, Vezina had the team laughing and fired up, and his Dawgs won their final four games to head into the offseason with momentum.

The next fall, Western won its first three, and the Bulldogs took a 7-2 record into the showdown with the Orediggers.

That game came to one play at the end, the Tech made it.

Western was a talented, well-coached team that season. But I can't help but feel the Bulldogs would have never made the season come down to one play if it wasn't for that nudge from Vez the year before.

Vez was all about that nudge. Whether it was as a teacher a coach or a friend, Vez made life better for everyone he touched. He did that tenfold when he was making cancer work overtime.

Four years was a really long time to fight cancer that had long ago spread through his body. It was a long time to smile while he must have been going through hell inside.

So, last Thursday night I got the text message I had been fearing, but I knew was coming. Vez finally gets to rest easy while his many, many friends are left with broken hearts.

The kids of Dillon have lost a teacher who was born to teach them. The coaching fraternity has lost a character. Humanity lost a friend.

From here on out, game days will never be the same.

Stodden Park

Our Readers Write

Thanks for keeping me updated on the exciting additions to Stodden Park. It looks like the projects will add to the livability of Butte.

The article in the August 30th edition mentioned some additional sidewalks in the park. Will sidewalks also be added outside of the park? I recently drove by and it did not look like there were sidewalks on Utah Ave leading up to the park. The biking and walking infrastructure does not look safe for children and other pedestrians around the area. Some of my favorite memories about swimming as a kid involve biking with my brothers to the community pool in my hometown. The article also mentioned that an entrance may be added off of Rowe Road. What about adding a pedestrian entrance on Hill Avenue so walkers from that direction can get off of the road sooner? I don't think there is much in the way of sidewalks in that direction either. I would like the park to be safely accessible for all forms of transportation, not only those with a car.

Montana films subject of Archives talk

In conjunction with the Covellite International Film Festival, the Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives will continue its Brown Bag Lunch series on Wednesday, September 13, with a presentation by Brian D'Ambrosio entitled "Shot In Montana: A History of Big Sky Cinema."

For nearly a century, movies have been made in Montana. From megahits with the biggest Hollywood stars to acclaimed independent films and forgettable flops, nearly a hundred movies have been made, in whole or in part, in Montana, and for the first time this treasure trove of filmmaking has been thoroughly researched and documented. In "Shot in Montana: A History of Big Sky Cinema," Montana author D'Ambrosio describes every movie, including the actors, directors, and shooting locations, and reveals fascinating stories and incidents that took place behind the cameras.

D'Ambrosio is a Montana journalist, author, and poet. He lives in Helena, where he writes for a variety of publications. His favorite subjects: history, architecture, biography, boxing, NHL tough guys, photography, forgotten inventors, and obscure American poets and authors. He is happy to sign copies of the book following the lecture.

The presentation will begin at noon and run about an hour at the Archives, 17 W. Quartz. Guests are encouraged to bring a sack lunch. Coffee and water will be provided.

Brown Bag Lunches are held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Upcoming lectures will focus topics of local interest. For more information, contact the Archives at 782-3280.

Park Street Concerns

Our Readers Write

In 2014 I read an article, with a picture of the Planning Director, Senator Jon Sesso, announcing to the public that they had received funding to revamp Excelsior, from Platinum to Caledonia St., and Park Street from Montana St. to Mt. Tech Campus. I saw Mr. Sesso at a commissioners meeting in 2015 asking why nothing was being done on Excelsior & Park St. He said it was being put off until 2019. I asked why and he said the State has to approve their part of the funding. The original press release stated we had the money. My concern at that time was if we put a new sidewalk in would they destroy it when they started to work, because we live on the corner of Galena and Excelsior. He thought it would be wiser to wait.

In 2017 the Department of Transportation and Butte Silver Bow had a Public Meeting on 2/28/2017. Only a few people attended which didn't give a good accounting from the public.

One proposal was that these streets would be milled and paved with new asphalt. I talked to Nick Sandford of the Public Works Dept. on 8/24/17 and stated my concern that they were not removing the majority of the pavement, because every time they paved throughout the years, they just pave over the top of the old pavement. He stated that they were milling the top 2 inches and repaving the top 2 inches. They need to take it down to the original pavement so the wheels of our cars don't drop at least 10 inches into the street drainage.

To me and others, the worse proposal was removing two travel lanes into one in each direction, adding bike lanes, and turning lanes. They only need a few turning lanes on all of Park & Exel.. We do not need bike lanes. How many people do you see using them in the summer let alone in the winter? There are many business and apartment complexes on Park and all their renters and customers have to park parallel which causes traffic slow down even though we have two lanes going each way now. One of the reasons Mr. Dave Schultz, head of Butte Public Works gave me for taking two lanes away was to slow down the traffic. In the winter we have enough trouble with snow removal. This will make it difficult for the drivers to maneuver around the snow and the equipment used to remove the snow.

Jackelyn Smith, architect for the Mt. Department of Transportation, said she would be glad to come from Helena to show us plans of what they intended to do. Also Joe Walsh M.D.of T. out of Butte would be glad to talk to the public. They were both very nice, but didn't think we need two lanes of traffic (as it is now).

Would love to hear the opinions of others from Butte, agreeing or disagreeing with me, so we can hear all opinions from the public. Just e-mail butte.news@butteweekly.com. Thanks for listening and voicing your opinion. We all need to stand up for what we believe if we want change.

A great summer—so far

By Robin Jordan

Although Labor Day generally marks the end of summer, some of us are stubbornly hanging onto the season.

Despite the inconvenience of smoke from area forest fires, we've been enjoying the extended run of warm weather to continue working on our long list of summer projects. Still, we're pretty pleased with what we've gotten done so far. It's been a busy season and we're sure we'll look back on the summer of 2017 with plenty of happy memories.

As usual, the garden has been a mix of great joy and some disappointment. While we're still enjoying plenty of fresh lettuce and carrots from the garden, we had only a few peas from the few vines that managed to make it through the season. We had way more radishes than we could use, but we were able to share some with friends and neighbors. We've had some nice zucchini and we may get a few more before the frost comes.

This summer, my husband, Dave, has done plenty of backyard barbequing, serving up some of the tastiest chicken and ribs we've ever tasted. Teamed up with homemade potato or macaroni salad, corn on the cob and some veggies from the garden, his efforts have given the family some of the best Sunday dinners we can remember.

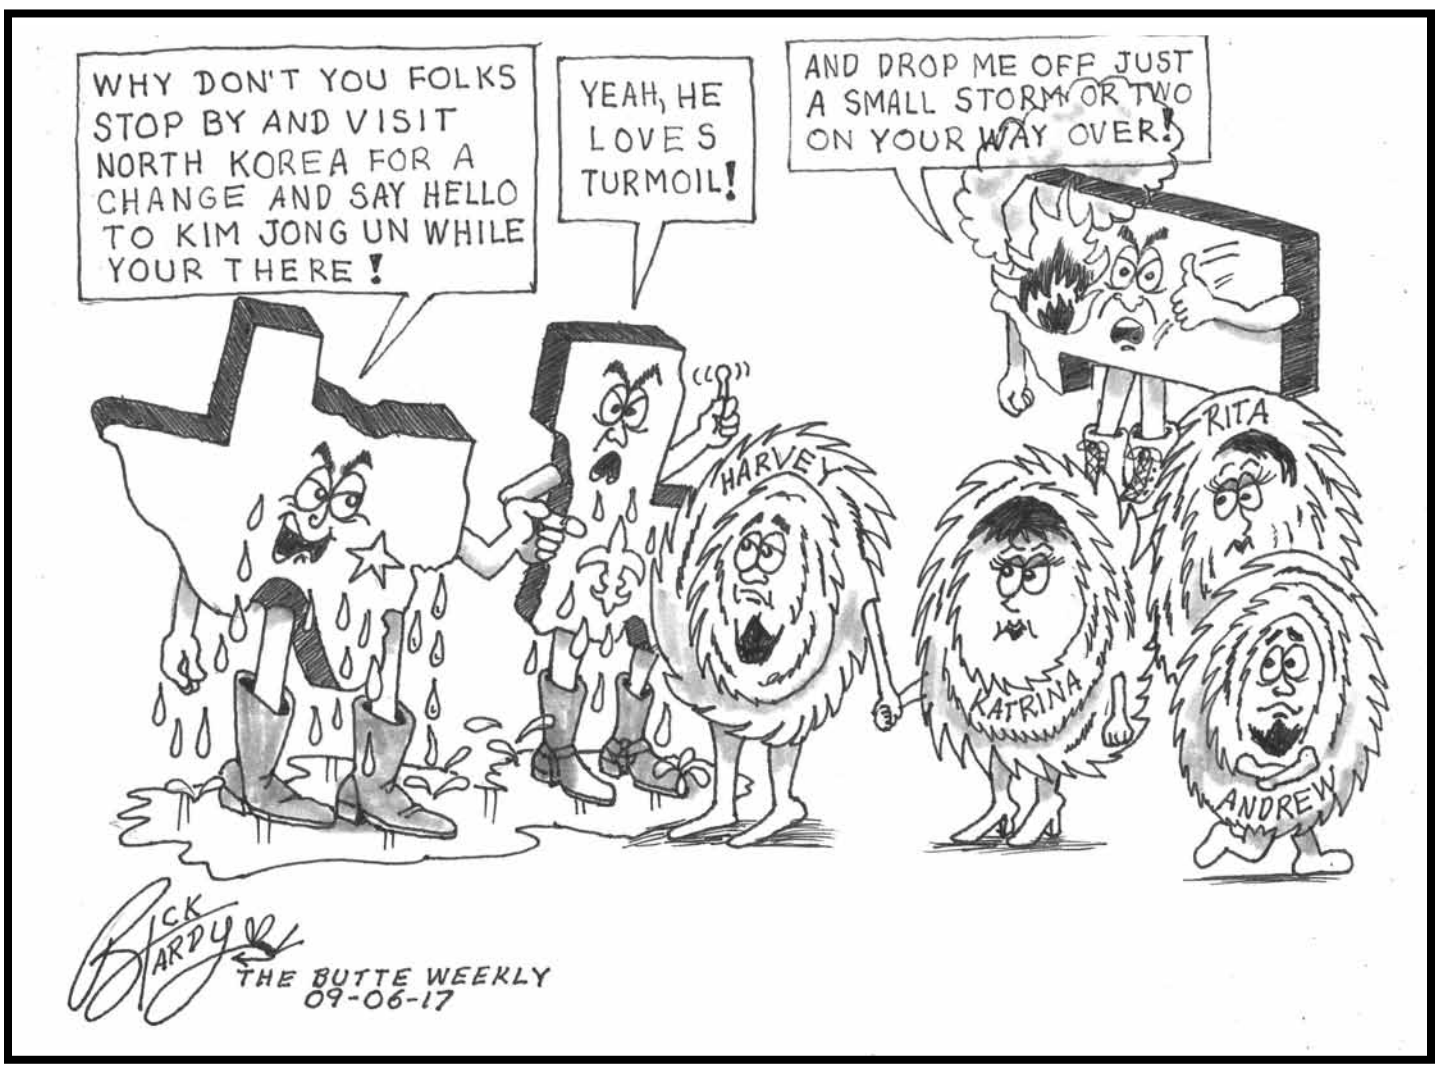
Having replaced the bumper on the family's 1962 Impala, a feat that looked a whole lot simpler than it proved to be, we've ordered a couple more parts for the classic car and hope to get them onto the car soon. Hopefully, our good weather will continue and we can take some more cruises in the Chevy before it has to go in the garage for the winter.

Currently, we're working on redoing the front of my mother's house, replacing an old faux brick finish with a new product. Of course, this meant that we had to remove all the old brick, which was fairly easy in some sections and kind of hard in others. After several trips to the landfill, we've gotten that done. I'm still scraping and sanding windows so we can paint them and Dave's still scraping old mortar off the wall, but the project is coming along well so far. I'm sure I'll be writing more about this project as we get further along.

Of course, we've taken plenty of breaks in the chores this summer to take the dogs, Bucky and Cori for rides out to the woods. They've enjoyed going to their favorite spots, playing in the area creeks, walking in the woods, and, for Cori, chasing the Frisbee until the humans just can't throw it anymore.

I have to admit, when Dave and I sold the Butte Weekly, I wondered how I would like being semi-retired. Now, it seems like we have so much work to do, I wonder how I ever managed to find the time to hold down a full-time job!

It's been a great summer for us, and we hope there's plenty of good weather left. Here's hoping we have a long and glorious fall with plenty more adventures ahead before the snows fly.



Tax Reform For Our Oligarchy

By George Waring

Earlier I focused on the Koch Brothers' funding of a nationwide PR effort in support of the expected Paul Ryan tax reform whose beneficiaries are our corporate oligarchy. The Club for Growth, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and the Business Roundtable are now allied with the Koch Brother organizations, Americans for Prosperity and Freedom Partners, in funding the national ad campaign that should cost tens of millions.

Earlier I called attention to guarantees Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin has been giving since November, guarantees that the focus of President Trump's tax policy is reducing middle class taxes. Mnuchin has stated there would be "no absolute tax cut for the upper class," and that Trump's priority "is about creating a middle-income tax cut."

It's difficult to believe Mnuchin's guarantees, given the sketchy news so far released about Republican tax reform goals. The Koch groups are advertising a Republican tax reform that is far removed from "creating a middle-income tax cut." Their PR campaign presents five principles as the basis for tax reform. Each principle emphasizes benefits for our oligarchy.

For example, the principle of "Simplicity" demands an end to deductions. How does ending deductible charitable contributions, medical expenses, the home mortgage deduction, child care expenses, educational expenses, union dues, etc. "create a middle-income tax cut"? The Koch Brothers' principle of "Efficiency" demands an end to tax credits. How does ending the earned income tax credit or the child care tax credit help working families? Their principle of "Equitability" also demands an end to tax credits and deductions. How does ending ways that were devised to make our federal tax system more progressive, thus more equitable, belong in a tax reform benefiting the middle class?

From the standpoint of increasing the wealth of our oligarchy, the five Koch Brothers' principles make sense. The principle of "Simplicty" demands "unburdening investment earnings" and abolishing the Alternative Minimum Tax. Unburdened investments would indicate a reduction in, or abolition altogether of the capital gains tax. Abolishing the Alternative Minimum Tax certainly benefits billionaires. We have proof from the one tax report of Donald Trump's leaked to the public, that return in which the Alternate Minimum Tax requirement forced him to pay $30 million rather than the $5 million he claimed because of his deductions. How does the abolition of the AMT, a tax that the wealthy are required to pay, indicate concern for the middle class? Just the opposite. Abolishing the AMT makes our federal tax system regressive, not progressive.

Under the Koch Brothers' principle of "Efficiency" is found abolition of the estate tax and gift taxes. These taxes are paid by couples with wealth of $12 million or more. That's not middle class. And the principle of "Efficiency" also includes lower taxes on investment income. Let's hope there is a cut off that does not allow Trump family investments to qualify for "middle class" treatment.

The fifth Koch Brothers' principle is "Predictability." This is where the Koch groups herald the ending of the federal tax on profits generated overseas by American corporations. From now on, only the income that corporations generate within the United States needs to be reported when they pay their income tax. The Koch Brothers' principle of "Predictability" is also meant to justify Grover Norquist's dream of prohibiting Congress from ever imposing a new tax. And, to drive home just what this means for the Koch Brothers, there is specific mention of Congress never being able to impose a "carbon tax." The Koch Brothers need never worry again about their oil and coal industry profits.

Who benefits from this Koch Brothers, Trump/Ryan, Republican Party tax reform? There's nothing here that qualifies as a worker or middle-class income tax reduction.

Multinational corporations get their income tax reduced from 35% to 15%. They no longer need report overseas earnings. Wealthy families will no longer pay the estate or gift taxes. There's a promise of either a much lower capital gains tax on investments, or the abolition of the capital gains tax altogether.

Finally, there's a special provision allowing hedge fund managers to use the new lower corporate income tax rate of 15% instead of the higher personal income tax rate based on size of income. This seems to be the kind of boondoggle two Goldman Sachs alumni might sneak into tax reform. Perhaps, their financial reward for patiently and silently abandoning their personal morality at a time when a White Supremacist poses as President of the United States.

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

Remember the Carousel Car Cruise will be held Saturday September 9th, from 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM, at the Carousel site in Stodden park. Along with a great collection of classic cars and trucks, the building will be open for everyone to see the progress we've made and all that still needs to be done. Come on by and take a look. You can also see the progress on the new aquatic facility.

Randy Clayton, who returned to his home town after almost 40 years in the Seattle area, has enthusiastically adopted our Carousel as a project to focus his time and talent on. In addition to almost daily work at the site, he is actively trying to get donations and more volunteers. Give him a pat on the back if you see him.

Do the same for Bob Foley and Tom Davies who have been wiring almost every Monday and Friday for a year or more and are closing in on finishing the job. Many others have been there intermittently and are much appreciated, but these two have been reassuringly dependable.

Getting the walls and ceiling finished remains the biggest hang-up to being able to move on to completion of the interior, it has been agonizingly and frustratingly slow, especially since it is not being done as a volunteer project.

People have commented on the rough state of the front landscaping. We will be smoothing it out some in the next couple of weeks, but the majority of it will be done as part of the Stodden Park Improvement Plan. The overall change to the area will be amazing.

We poured the footing concrete two years ago last week. We all thought we would be finished by now; it's been a real test of optimism. Determination remains unfazed. A lot has gotten done and the horses are getting restless, knowing we are close.

Fire Restrictions

Allowed by counties
- Residential use of charcoal grills, propane and LP gas as long as the fires are supervised by a responsible person at least 18 years old.

The restrictions will remain in effect until there is a significant change in fire danger.

Some counties have specific exemptions on private land so be sure to know what those are. Visit the Fire Restrictions website https://firerestrictions.us/mt/ or the specific County's website to view those exemptions.

The purpose of fire restrictions is to reduce the risk of human-caused fires during periods of very high to extreme fire danger. These areas are experiencing critical fire conditions, including dry fuels, hot temperatures, low humidity, and high winds, all of which are expected to continue.

For additional information on fire restrictions, visit the fire restrictions website at https://firerestrictions.us/mt/ or call your local fire management agency, volunteer fire department, or county office.

Are You a "Hardworking" Investor?

Next week, we observe Labor Day, a celebration of the American worker. You work hard your whole life with the hope that your efforts will ultimately allow you to achieve your financial goals, such as a comfortable retirement. But for that to happen, you may need to apply some of the lessons of the workplace to your efforts as an investor.

So, what are these lessons? Here are a few to consider:

Be consistent. The most successful workers are the ones who show up, day after day, and strive to overcome the inevitable obstacles that crop up. As an investor, you, too, need to be consistent in your habits – which means you should keep investing in all types of markets. If you take a "time out" every time the market drops, you might end up missing opportunities when the next rally begins.

Be flexible. When good workers see that something is not going well, they change what they're doing. And when you invest, you also may need to make adjustments. If an investment has consistently underperformed, or if you have too many others very similar to it, or if it just doesn't meet your needs anymore, you may be better off by selling it and using the proceeds to invest elsewhere. This doesn't mean you should constantly be buying and selling — in fact, you'll likely be better off by purchasing quality investments and holding them for the long term. But you need to be flexible enough to make the appropriate moves at the appropriate times.

Be informed. The best workers are those who regularly update their skills and acquire knowledge that helps them do their jobs better. As an investor, you should also keep learning – about the investment world in general and about new opportunities for you to explore. And you should always understand what you are investing in – and why. Even if you work with a financial professional, you need to inform yourself about every aspect of your investment portfolio – after all, it's your money and your future.

Be farsighted. Good workers not only know what they're doing – they also can visualize the desired outcome of each task. And, of course, people who are in charge of a particular endeavor, or who are responsible for the fortunes of a business, have a clear view of what they want to accomplish, even if the achievement of that goal is many years in the future. When you invest, you also need to see where you want to go. If you can constantly keep in mind your long-term goals – such as the type of retirement lifestyle you desire – you will likely find it easier to stick with an investment strategy that's appropriate for your needs and risk tolerance. Conversely, if you lose sight of your destination, you might be more prone to taking short-term detours, which could work against you.

Labor Day reminds us to appreciate the skills and dedication of all workers – and as an investor, you can put these same attributes to good use.

Simple Stress Relieving Techniques

Even when things are going well, it is difficult to take time for ourselves and to actively practice stress relief. Let's take a look at a few easy but effective techniques to manage our every-day anxieties. Most of these can be done anytime and anywhere. You don't have to be home relaxing.

Doing almost any routine, repetitive activity (like vacuuming, shredding paper or knitting), is calming. If you don't have a task to do that fits the bill, and you haven't mastered knitting or crocheting, you can try reciting a word that represents how you wish you felt (such as calm). This is a quick way to achieve a Zen-like state.

Studies show the effects of both the repetitive activities and saying a word over and over lower blood pressure and slow heart rate and breathing. The crucial elements are to focus on a word, your breathing or a movement and to bring your attention back to your task if your mind wanders or negative thoughts intrude. You can also look to your faith for a mantra: A recent study published in the Journal of Advanced Nursing found that repeating phrases with spiritual meanings helped participants cope with a range of problems, from anxiety to insomnia.

Focusing on past successes can be a wonderful way to re-live a happy time, as well as to keep you from being discouraged at a present-time problem. Take a few minutes to reflect on how you pulled through other stressful situations like a breakup or job switch. This can help you reconnect with your resilient side.

In the moment, your present problem may seem overwhelming. When you look back, you realize that you felt similarly before and found a way to overcome it. If you're going through a major life change, like a divorce, or you have recently lost a loved one, you may want to seek out a support group: Research on grieving suggests that talking with peers is even more beneficial than one-on-one counseling in the initial months after a loss.

Turn on some tunes. Many of you are already doing this, as there are so many more easy ways to play music than ever before. According to a recent study published in the British journal Heart, slow or meditative music is a proven stress buster, so set your dial to a soothing station while running errands or driving to work. Play music when you are doing housework or preparing meals. If it is permitted at your place of employment, have calming music playing in the background to help you cope with challenges there.

Take the stress in and release it. I love this idea, and although it isn't conventional, or a method we were taught when we were growing up, I think it is worth a try. Literally embrace whatever it is you're going through and then let it go. Try doing a tai chi exercise known as "embracing the tiger," where you take your arms, spread them wide, put your hands together and then draw them—and everything around you—toward your navel, the center of your being. Doing this allows you to take the good with the bad. Then reverse your hands and push them out, releasing your tension. When you can control stress, it can no longer control you.

What's Cooking

Bowties and Broccoli

By Debbie Sorensen

Summer time foods can add fun to the family table. If you enjoy growing broccoli in your garden, you might like trying this out. This recipe comes from "Great Taste- No Pain" by Sherry Brescia.

For me, a delightful aspect of cooking is finding a recipe that works for having small children help. Once the adult jobs of dealing with heat for cooking, steaming and sautéing are completed, I can then invite my six-handed mixing crew to come help complete our extravagant culinary delight. Usually, I will have the additional ingredients and seasonings prepped and waiting to be added, before I extended the "all hands to the kitchen" offer.

As the anxious trio dance around with anticipation, I get the necessary stools and equipment in place and the mad dash to the counter ensues!

The six and four year olds can whack up the broccoli with their plastic knives (or pull it apart-whatever works). The two year old, can stand on a stool at the sink and start moving the cooled pasta from the cooking pot to a large mixing bowl. Then he can move it forth and back; back and forth; and on and on. He's very intent at his post.

It can be interesting, as each helper wants to be sure and get their turn at mixing the remaining ingredients in the bowl. But with a flourish and sprinkle, we manage to bring the frantic episode to completion. Everyone is ready to eat a part of what they've put together (thank goodness). Best of all, it tastes great.

Bowties and Broccoli

1 1 lb. box of bowtie pasta (or shape of your choice)
1 1/2 c. olive oil, divided
2 bunches broccoli, broken into florets
8 cloves garlic, minced
1 c. chopped fresh parsley
1 c. grated Parmesan Cheese
Garlic salt and pepper to taste

Cook pasta in a large soup kettle in a generous amount of water. (Optional, add salt and oil.)
While pasta cooks, steam broccoli until just tender; drain and set aside. Sauté garlic in 1/2 c. olive oil until fragrant but not browned; remove from heat and set aside.

When pasta is done, drain and return to soup pot. Stir the parsley, grated cheese, broccoli and remaining olive oil into the pan with the garlic. Add garlic salt and pepper to taste. If mixture seems too dry, add a little bit more olive oil. Mix together with pasta and broccoli.

Sprinkle additional cheese on top, if desired and serve. Yield: 6-8 servings

Forest fires, hurricanes both linked to warming oceans

By Paul Vang

"Odd. No one is in denial of America's Aug 21 total solar eclipse. Like Climate Change, methods & tools of science predict it." Twitter feed from Neil deGrasse Tyson.

On the day, last week, when I started writing this week's column, our air here in Butte was officially rated as "unhealthy." We didn't need an official rating from scientists, however. You could see it, taste it, smell, it and make the same conclusion. The smoke is from fires that have been ravaging Montana since early July, with new ones popping up almost daily.

At the same time, Hurricane Harvey was drenching the Gulf Coast of Texas and Louisiana with feet of rain.

While these events seem diametrically opposite, it's pretty certain the events have a lot in common.

Of course, forest fires are not new, as are hurricanes and floods. But, as Christopher Joyce, National Public Radio's science correspondent noted on a segment of "All Things Considered" last week, regarding Harvey, there have always been big storms. He went on to note that a new factor is warmer oceans, and those warmer oceans provide more energy for storms to feed off of, and the oceans, on average, are a full degree warmer than a century ago.

The Gulf of Mexico, he explained, is a full four degrees warmer than usual, and that has been causing ocean water to evaporate and rise up, and a four-degree rise produces a lot of water vapor. A somewhat unusual aspect of Harvey was that parts of the storm system stayed over the Gulf providing a pipeline to the main storm hanging over the mainland of the Gulf Coast.

As for the future, Joyce said, "If the oceans get hotter…a really big storm that might happen once every hundred years now may be happening every 50 or every 20. And that may actually be happening already, but you can't tell where or when."

Meanwhile, in Missoula, the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior, Sonny Perdue and Ryan Zinke, along with Senator Daines and Rep. Gianforte, held a press event after getting a nickel tour of the Lolo Peak fire, proclaiming that "radical environmentalists" were to blame, presumably because of hold-ups in logging, even though the Forest Service acknowledges that logging goals have mostly been met.

No, I would submit that the real problem has been that not enough people have been paying enough attention to radical environmentalists who have been forecasting for over a century that our addiction to fossil fuels and greenhouse gases would cause climate warning and consequent climate instability.

Just as the oceans are getting warmer, so are the forests of western Montana. We had a good snow cover this past winter, and our spring and early summer precipitation was at or above average. Forecasters were predicting an average or below average fire season. Then, at the beginning of July, temperatures soared into the nineties and we were suddenly in fire season. Eastern Montana, which was already in drought mode, had the state's biggest fire, with over 270,000 acres of rangelands reduced to ashes.

Alas, the fact of climate change and the underlying science has been politicized, with the president of the United States being the denier-in-chief, who proclaimed on the campaign trail last year that climate change was a big hoax perpetuated by China.

The president appointed to run the EPA a former Oklahoma Attorney General, Scott Pruitt, who recently said, "Science is not something that should be thrown about to try and dictate policy in Washington, D.C."

A high profile vacancy in the Department of Agriculture is the head of the Office of the Chief Scientist, with the mission to insure that scientific advice provided to the Department is "held to the highest standards of intellectual rigor and scientific integrity." The president has nominated Sam Clovis, a former college economics professor and conservative talk show host who has stated, regarding climate change, "a lot of the science is junk science."

I'm not a scientist, but I respect science and scientists. Denying science can be hazardous to your health, home, and livelihood.

This Week In Labor History September 6th - September 12th

"In a Fascist system, it's not the lies that count but the muddying. When citizens can't tell real news from fake, they give up their demands for accountability bit by bit."
-Naomi Wolf, author, journalist, political adviser

Wednesday, Sept 6:
One of the worst disasters in the history of U.S. anthracite mining occurred at the Avondale Mine, near Scranton, Pa., when a fire originating from a furnace at the bottom of a 237-foot shaft roared up the shaft, killing 110 miners. -1869
In the mining town of Spring Valley, Illinois, Emma Goldman heads a Labor Day procession, which ends with a meeting in the central market place, a direct violation of the Mayor's denial of authorization to do so. -1899

Thursday, Sept 7:
Federal employees win the right to pay into and receive Workers' Compensation insurance coverage. -1916
32nd Emmy Awards: Notable for going ahead despite 51 of the 52 nominated performers boycotting the event in order to honor the picket line of striking members of the Screen Actors Guild. -1980

Friday, Sept 8:
The bosses give in to the demands of striking Wobblies (IWW) in McKees Rock, Pa. where 11 unarmed workers had been shot and killed by a deputy during the strike. The bosses agreed to safer working conditions, a raise of 15 percent and an end to the "pool system" that gave foremen control over each worker's pay. It was the IWW's biggest victory to date and enrages the nations Capitalists. -1909
Cesar Chavez led farm workers in California on their first grape boycott. The nationwide protest lasted 5 years and ended with the first Union contract for U.S. farm workers outside of Hawaii. In 1966, Chavez's organization officially became the United Farm Workers. -1965

Saturday, Sept 9:
Butte Montana: During the first week under martial law (protecting the Anaconda Company's interest) National Guard troops had removed Butte's democratically elected Socialist Mayor and Sheriff from office and arrested Union leaders. Today the Anaconda Company announces it will no longer recognize any Union and declares Butte an "open shop". The workers were forced to work in the mines for the Capitalists at the end of a bayonet in "the land of the free". -1914
Over 1,000 Boston police strike when 19 Union leaders are fired for organizing activities. The National Guard is called up to restore order and all strikers are fired. -1919

Sunday, Sept 10:
Sheriff Deputies slaughter 19 unarmed coal miners striking outside of Hazleton, Pennsylvania. The strikers were fighting for decent wages and safer working conditions in the one of the most brutal industries in the nation. -1897
The Colorado National Guard under Adjutant General Sherman Bell began a series of daily arrests of Union officers and supporters during a strike in the Cripple Creek District. When a Judge held a hearing on writs of habeas corpus General Bell said "Habeas corpus be damned, we'll give 'em post mortems!" -1903

Monday, Sept 11:
75,000 coal miners in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia end a 10-week strike after winning an 8-hour day, semi-monthly pay, and the abolition of overpriced company owned stores, where they had been forced to shop. -1897
3,000 people died when suicide hijackers from Saudi Arabia, financed by Osama bin Laden, crashed planes into the World Trade Center towers, the Pentagon and a Pennsylvania field. Among the dead were 634 Union members including 343 firefighters and paramedics, 23 New York City police officers, and 37 Port Authority police officers who were attempting to save workers trapped on higher floors of the buildings. -2001

Tuesday, Sept 12:
Butte Montana: Citing a slump in the copper prices the Amalgamated Copper Mining Company reduces its work force by half. Almost all of the mines on the Hill shut down by December. -1907
National Guardsmen fire on unarmed strikers at the Woonsocket (Rhode Island) Rayon plant, murdering one and injuring three others. Word spread, 6,000 more workers arrived at the scene and the city was put under military rule. Deliberately red-baiting the public, the Governor falsely declared that "there is a Communist uprising and not a textile strike" in the state. -1934
