Allergy Season

'Tis the season to sneeze, complain about sinus headaches, get itchy eyes, or say you can't mow the lawn because you're allergic. While Spring has traditionally been the season of "hay fever," many people suffer all year round with what we all call "allergies." Whether it's a sensitivity to dust, animal hair, a certain food, or heavy-duty perfume, millions of humans around the world deal with health problems brought on by a fight-or-flight reaction to a substance that their bodies don't like.

Years ago, during the summer on the East coast, I could not breathe. My nasal cavity felt like it was filled with concrete. In addition, it was a very stressful time, so my adrenal glands were already working overtime pumping out adrenalin. (The adrenals are involved in the allergy response). Heeding pressure from my peers to see a physician, I made an appointment with an "allergist" only to meet a man who smoked cigarettes!! Granted, this was in the 1980s, but even I knew he was a medical contradiction, and so could I trust his advice? When he prescribed steroids, I knew I wasn't going to fill the prescription. My adrenal glands were already pumping out too much cortisol; how could this drug help my traumatized body?

These days, many allergy sufferers resort to heavy drugs, because the relief can be immediate. However, like many pharmaceuticals, side effects are possible, and long term use can have larger repercussions over time.

More than 50 million Americans deal with seasonal allergies, and most want a remedy that doesn't make you catatonic or leave your mouth desert dry. When hit with nasal congestion, headache, watery eyes, sneezing or wheezing, there is more you can do than just suffer or take medications with side effects. Natural relief exists, and it's effective.

Homeopathic remedies, herbs, vitamins and minerals all provide alternatives to allergy drugs. While there is no "one-remedy-fits-all" cure, over-the-counter natural remedies are reliable when product directions are followed.

Homeopathy is a safe and effective form of natural medicine that stimulates the body's own natural ability to heal. Delivering a micro-dose of an offending substance, such as an allergen, homeopathic remedies encourage the body to react in a healing mode. Unlike allergy shots, which often cause discomfort, homeopathy provides gentle relief, while building resistance without shocking the body.

Many homeopathic remedies treat symptoms such as itchy and runny nose and eyes, sinus congestion and pain, and skin irritation. Others help the body desensitize to a specific allergen, like tree and grass pollen, animal dander, dust or mold. These remedies come in convenient liquid or sublingual pill form, which dissolve immediately under the tongue. Homeopathic eye drops for allergic eyes are a soothing relief, as are nasal sprays that help clear sinus passages and prevent infection.

The most effective vitamin therapy is Vitamin C, including the flavonoids, especially quercitin. These work by inhibiting the release of histamines, the biochemicals that create the allergic effect. These histamines are just doing their job protecting the body from "enemies", but calming their production is the key to allergy control. Vitamin C also breaks down the histamine if it has already been released in the body, so an allergy attack will be less severe. It has been proven that subjects with low Vitamin C levels tend to have high levels of histamines in their blood, leading to allergy problems. Vitamin C is best taken for long periods of time as a preventative, so if you know you have hay fever, for example, start taking higher doses of C mid-winter.

Quercitin has a cellular structure that resembles the drugs that help or restrict histamine release. Combined with Vitamin C, quercitin is a natural and effective allergy remedy.

Also combined with 1,000 mg of Vitamin C, the nontoxic, nonmetallic sulfur compound MSM boosts the immune system and combats inflammation. It has been documented that the anti-allergy properties of MSM are equal to or better than chemical anti-histamines, without the side effects.

Finally, herbs such as stinging nettle, a natural anti-histamine, local bee pollen (although rumor has it this is questionable), white willow bark, eyebright and golden-seal all help relieve allergy symptoms. The only caution with certain herbs is a possible allergic reaction: make sure none of them are in the family of plants to which you are allergic.

If you a seasonal allergy person, or allergic all year, and allergy drugs are dulling your life, breathe easy with natural allergy remedies.
