SWMTCHC earns recognition at conference

Butte, Mont. – The Butte Child Evaluation Center of the Southwest Montana Community Health Center was named as the “most heartwarming” project at the Montana Healthy Communities Conference in Helena on Nov. 1-2.

“When we have law enforcement, family services and medical providers who understand trauma-informed approaches to care, this benefits everyone and in the long run will likely improve the overall health and wellness of our communities,” said Molly Molloy, director of the CEC.

The Child Evaluation Center assists children who are suspected victims of physical, sexual, emotional, drug-endangered, neglect or witnesses to violence or internet crimes using a multi-disciplinary team approach.

The Child Evaluation Center was one of more than 30 projects featured as “What Works in Montana” showcasing successful projects that make a difference in their communities.

Zoning board approves permit for Rescue Mission shelter

By Robin Jordan

Butte-Silver Bow's Zoning Board approved a permit last week for the Butte Rescue Mission to use a parcel of land at the corner of Arizona and east Platinum streets for its new homeless shelter.

However, the permit comes with a number of conditions that must be met, including changes to the property deed that have to be approved by the BNSF Railroad, the EPA and the state Department of Environmental Quality. In addition, the Rescue Mission will have to submit plans and obtain a number of permits from the county for excavation, which will include dealing with mine waste on the property, storm water retention, sewer and water line extensions, parking, landscaping and installing sidewalks, curbs and gutters.

Among other conditions, the Rescue Mission will have to appoint a staff liaison to coordinate with local government agencies, law enforcement, neighborhood businesses and local residents regarding issues with operation of the facility. The liaison has to create a process to receive and record complaints or issues from neighbors and record steps taken to address the problems and record any municipal code violations.

The Mission plans to bring in 11 portable living units, which will be assembled into two units, men's and women's dormitory buildings, to house shelter clients. Along with sleeping quarters, the buildings will have a kitchen and dining room, laundry facilities, restrooms and showers. The Mission also plans to use an existing warehouse on the property for staff offices, training, classes, laundry and showers.

Roxella “Rocky” Lyons, Executive Director of the Butte Rescue Mission told the zoning board she is confident the Mission can meet all the conditions of the permit. She said the Mission is already working with Pioneer Technical Services and city-county officials on the deed changes and other requirements.

Only three residents spoke in opposition to the Rescue Mission's plan.

Tim Wright told the board he owns property at the corner of Ohio and Platinum Streets he hopes to use for a coffee shop. He said he feared having the homeless shelter so close to his shop might adversely affect business.

James Daily said he lives near the Rescue Mission's former shelter location and that neighborhood conditions have improved since the shelter closed. He said he and other neighbors experienced problems with those refused service or kicked out of the shelter trespassing on their property, making noise and littering. He said the new location was too close to Butte High School and uptown businesses who are already struggling with problems caused by vagrants.

Larry Juhl, who also lives in the neighborhood of the Mission's former location, said the proposed shelter's maximum occupancy of 56 people would make it one of the largest homeless shelters in the state. He said Butte does not need that large a shelter and that it would draw more homeless people to the community. He said large infrastructure costs associated with building the new shelter could better be spent on other programs to deal with the homeless. Furthermore, Juhl said, those staying at the shelter would be expected to leave in the morning and not return until the late afternoon, leaving them to wander the streets and cause problems for businesses and residents in the area.

In her rebuttal to opponents' comments, Lyons said the Mission's new shelter will be offering a number of new programs that will alleviate problems neighbors experienced with the old location on Second Street. Some of the programs the Mission plans to offer are help in resume writing, job searching and providing day work for clients.

Before voting on the permit, several mem-

For the last few years I knew the young Butte only as "Kaepernick." I wasn't alone in not knowing his birth name was Cade.

Young Cade gave himself the nickname, and everyone called him that. His teachers, his classmates, his friends all went along with what had the makings of a great handle.

The boy picked the name because he loved Colin Kaepernick, and this was 2012-2013, when Kaepernick was on top of the world.

Really, what was not to love about Kaepernick? He was a solid quarterback who was a threat to run and throw. He led the 49ers to the Super Bowl, and probably would have won it if it wasn't for the typically poor NFL officiating at the end of the game.

Kaepernick seemed like an All-American kid. He even had Bible verses tattooed onto his arms.

Then, everything changed.

BUTTE SPORTS

Waiting for the big football game in the sky

The quarterback Kaepernick started protesting police brutality by sitting, then taking a knee during the national anthem, and he became the poster child for a divided America. He couldn't have been more divisive on Facebook if he was a Russian bot.

Also, under no fault of Kaepernick, the 49ers suddenly shifted from a proud franchise to an organization that is hot garbage.

Since the start of the 2014 season, the 49ers are 16-42. Though Kaepernick put up solid numbers last year, the team went 2-14, and the controversial quarterback couldn't find a job in 2017.

In a year in which the Bears are paying Mike Glennon $18.5 million to look goofy on the sidelines, Kaepernick, who tossed 16 touchdowns and threw four interceptions for an awful team last season, is on the quarterback unemployment line.

And the young boy we called Kaepernick learned a tough lesson. You never name anyone – even yourself – after a living athlete.

I used to say never name after an active athlete, but that had to be amended.

Can you imagine what it must be like for the son of a Bills fan in the 70s to go through life with the name Orenthal James?

O.J. was great when he was running through airports for commercials and appearing in the Naked Gun movies. Then, everything changed.

Or even worse, can you imagine being named after Emmett Smith or Jerry Rice after the NFL Hall of Famers appeared on Dancing With the Stars?

If you're going to name your son or daughter after an athlete, make sure that athlete has left the Earth to play in the big football game in the sky.

Even naming your son after a Yankee legend like Derek Jeter isn't safe.

My friend who named his son after the shortstop has to feel silly now that Jeter went from being No. 2 on the Yankees to No. 1 Marlin.

For others, however, it is worse, even if the fathers are too simple to know it.

Nowadays, when it seems like another celebrity or public official is exposed as being a sexual predator every day, it is even more dangerous to name your son after, well, anyone.

Surprisingly, Jameis Winston is one of the latest to be accused. An Uber driver says the Tampa Bay Buccaneers quarterback groped her in 2016.

Yes, it is absolutely shocking that a guy who was accused of rape at Florida State could be accused of such a thing as a pro.

What won't be surprising will be to see players, coaches, officials and fans come out of the woodwork to defend the quarterback and blame the accuser in this latest Winston case.

It seems some people view the trend of women coming forward with allegations of sexual misconduct as the problem, like somehow false allegations severely outweigh the actual sexual assaults.

Some guys, like O.J. (wink, wink), are indeed framed, but, c'mon, guys who don't attack women don't get accused of it over and over.

Hey guys, these women feeling empowered to speak up about sexual assault are not the problem. This, believe it or not, is a sign that we might actually be on to a solution.

A big part of that problem is the partisan nature in which we react to the allegations, be it sports or politics.

Winston fans will call the woman a liar, but they will believe the accusations against Ben Roethlisberger. Steeler fans will stand up for Roethlisberger, while pointing a finger at Ezekiel Elliott.

If you have read up on the case of either NFL player and you still support and cheer for that player, then you are a sucker, at best.

It's kind of like how one side of the political aisle will think that the women accusing the president and a senatorial candidate of sexual assault are lying, while highlighting the accusations made against a former president and current senator. And vice versa.

Sexual assault should not be a partisan or team issue.

Instead of searching for talking points to defend the action of a dirt-bag player on your team, you should be heading to the courthouse to change the name of your son Ezekiel.

Or O.J. Or Jameis. Or Derek. Or Cade.

Yes, Cade.

I have a friend who named his boy after Cade McNown because he thought the UCLA quarterback would turn out to be the savior of his beloved Chicago Bears.

Before his Cade could even talk, it was already clear that the naming was a bad idea. Even Cade McNown would have told you it was a bad idea after his two chill-inducing years in Chicago.

McNown – and my friend – must say prayers of thanks every that there is an NFL Draft bust named Ryan Leaf that took the heat off the name Cade.

The young Cade I mentioned before no longer goes by "Kaepernick."

It's not because he's such a fan of freedom that he hates how others express their freedom. He's just a boy, so Cade is not political.

He just no longer wants to be a fan of the dumpster fire that has been the 49ers since they pushed Jim Harbaugh out of town.

Now, the boy formerly known as Kaepernick is following the Chargers because he became a Philip Rivers fan. He goes by Cade, though, not Rivers or Philip.

That is a good thing. Sure, Rivers seems like a decent enough guy, but we won't know that for sure until he's playing in the big football game in the sky.

Thanksgiving a time for family traditions

By Paul Vang

Tomorrow we again celebrate the holiday of Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving has a long history on this continent. Many of our traditions and folklore of the holiday go back to 1621 and the Plymouth Colony and the Puritan immigrants joining with the Native Americans who helped enable their survival to celebrate a harvest festival.

On the other hand, there are competing claims that the first thanksgiving celebration happened in 1565 in St. Augustine, Florida, or El Paso, Texas in 1598, or another observance in 1619 in the Virginia Colony.

In recent years, groups of Native Americans have held protests at Plymouth Rock, proclaiming Thanksgiving a National Day of Mourning. Others observe Native American Heritage Day on this holiday. Indeed, illustrations of happy and cheerful Native Americans and Pilgrims sharing an outdoor banquet on that first Plymouth Colony Thanksgiving Day hide the grim reality that their tribes soon became all but extinct because of diseases spread from Europeans, and warfare, once the Pilgrims became established. It's not a happy history. The first President of the United States, George Washington, issued a presidential proclamation designating November 26, 1789, "as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favours of Almighty god."

Thanksgiving was widely observed in many states, but often on different days, so in 1863 President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed a national day of Thanksgiving to be observed on the last Thursday of November. Southern states engaged in the Civil War didn't acknowledge Lincoln's proclamation, so it wasn't until 1870 that there was a true national observance of the day.

On December 26, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a Joint Resolution of Congress fixing the date of Thanksgiving as the fourth Thursday of November, something FDR previously did by presidential proclamation two years earlier to give the country the economic boost of another week of Christmas shopping.

While there are many Thanksgiving traditions, most families eventually create their own. My earliest Thanksgiving memories are of family dinners and "Over the river and through the woods to Grandmother's house we go." My grandmother was, in most years, the host of extended family gatherings. It would have been debatable whether conversations among these farmers about fall harvests and cattle prices were more in English or Norwegian, but the turkey dinner was totally traditional.

In recent years my wife and I have been on the road for Thanksgiving, making the long trip to the California Bay Area to celebrate the day with our daughter, Erin, and celebrating the day after Thanksgiving by going wine tasting in places such as Napa and Sonoma.

Those long road trips always carried risks of early winter snowstorms in the high Sierras, or anywhere else on the thousand miles between western Montana and northern California. We've never been snowbound, but we came close on some trips.

This year will be different. This year Erin told her corporate employer to "take this job and shove

So, we're thankful for many things this Thanksgiving. We're thankful for good health and being able to have an active and busy lifestyle.

I'm thankful for another year in the great outdoors, especially here in Montana, and being able to have opportunities to spend time on trout streams, prairies, and mountains.

I'm thankful for Nature's bounty, and that now in early winter, we have grouse, pheasants, ducks and venison in the freezer. I won't claim that we live on wild game but it's a privilege, in many countries reserved for the wealthy, to be able to enjoy occasional meals from the wild side.

I'm thankful for family and the blessings of growing older and being able to have seen our grandchildren grow up.

And, this year, I guess I'm also thankful for not having to worry about getting snowbound in Elko.

it," and then schemed a plan to move back to Montana. I use the word "back" advisedly, in that she hadn't actually lived in Montana since finishing 2nd grade in 1973, but she always claims Montana as her home state, so her move brings her home.

A time to be thankful

By Robin Jordan

This week, we celebrate Thanksgiving, a time for all of us to reflect on the past year, the good and the bad, and express our gratitude for the many blessings we have enjoyed.

It may seem difficult to find good things to celebrate for many in the world. The news this year has been filled with disaster and pain: natural disasters like hurricanes and forest fires have devastated many communities and even whole countries. Mass shootings and terrorist attacks have brought suffering to scores of families and wracked communities with fear. Racial strife continues in our own country and abroad and wars rage on overseas.

Here in our own home town, many families struggle with their own troubles—loss of a loved one, loss of a job, illness, financial setbacks or even homelessness. Finding gratitude in the midst of such suffering is a difficult thing.

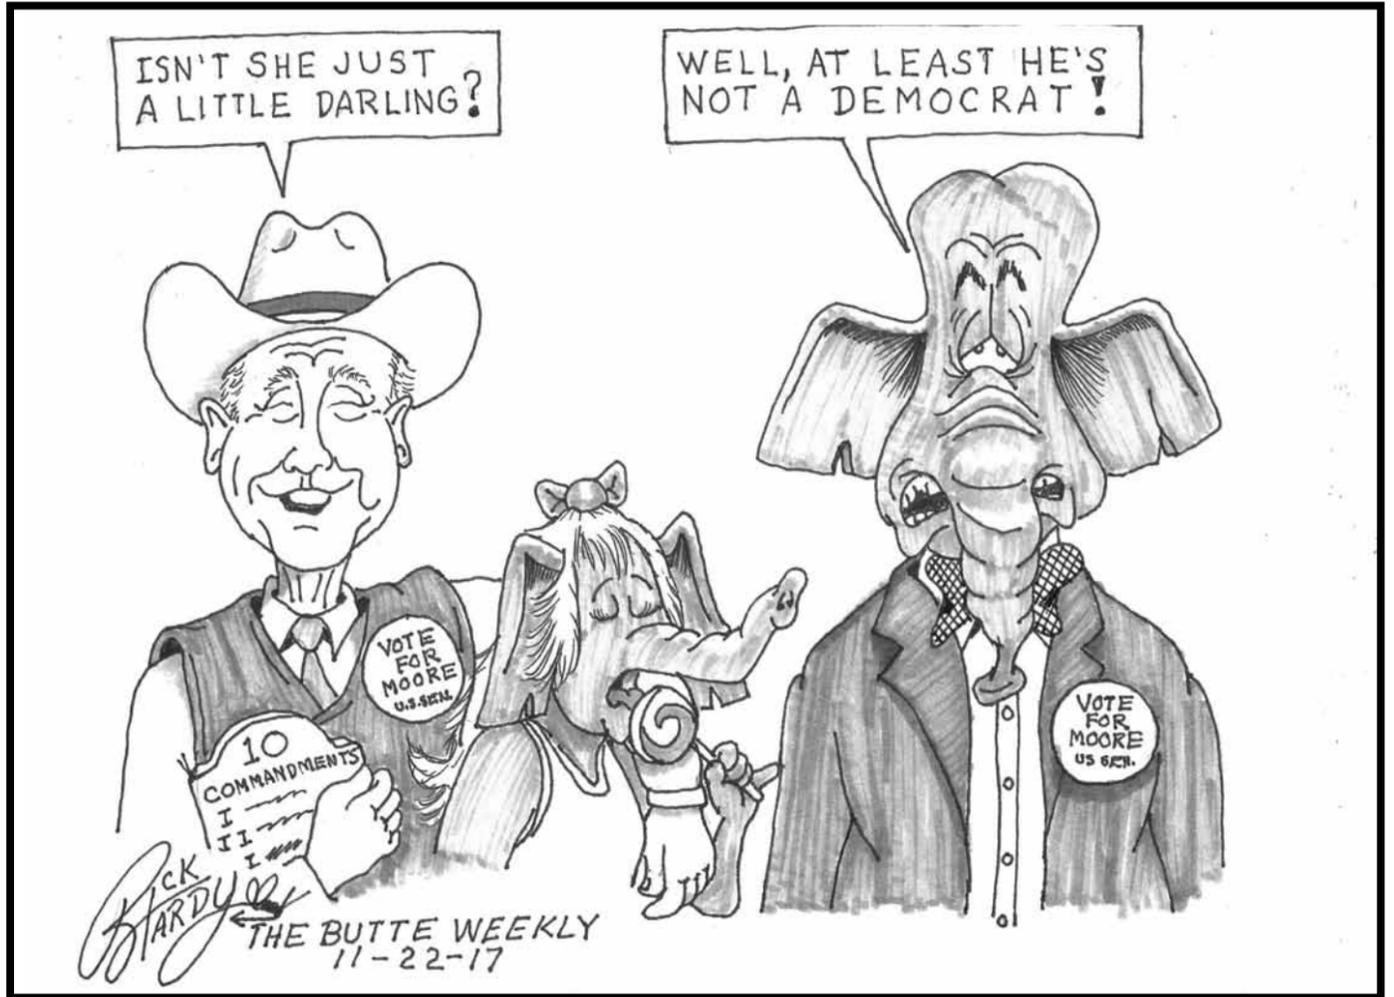

Still, most of us have much to be grateful for as we sit down to Thanksgiving dinner with family and friends.

We're grateful to live in a beautiful state and that we're lucky enough to live in Butte, a generous, friendly community with a rich history. We've seen plenty of positive developments here this year, bringing hope for more opportunities and more economic development in the future. While progress is slow, we are seeing headway made in cleaning up the mining damage of the past. A lot of hard work is going into projects like restoring Silver Bow Creek and creating a park in the middle of the city for all to enjoy.

Speaking of recreation, Butte is looking forward to the opening of a new waterpark at Stodden Park in the spring, along with the completion of our carousel and other park amenities. Improvements are underway that will open the Basin Creek Reservoir to recreation and work is also progressing on offering more recreational opportunities at the Moulton Reservoir.

Next January, we'll see the grand opening of Butte's new parking garage, which will be a boon to those who live and work uptown as well as shoppers and tourists in the district. Last spring, the new Basin Creek water treatment plant went into operation, bringing Butte some of the cleanest water in the United States. These two developments should put to rest two old myths about Butte—"You can't drink the water," and "There's no place to park in uptown Butte." We'd all certainly be grateful for that.

Personally, we're grateful for our family and friends. We're thankful for the challenges as well as for the many moments of joy, the small accomplishments and the little blessings each day together brings.

To all of our readers, have a happy Thanksgiving!

Passing Along Chomsky's Truths

By George Waring

As we gather for Thanksgiving, let's give thanks for the courage and persistence of Noam Chomsky, now 89 years old. The Nation web site features an interview Chomsky gave to Christopher Lydon in early June. Lydon notes in his introduction that The New York Times calls Chomsky "arguably" the most important public thinker alive, but "seldom quotes him, or argues with him." And you'll never see Chomsky on PBS, much less the corporate news networks, owned by the corporations profiting from the military industrial complex essential to the health of the American empire. You'll hear Chomsky being interviewed by David Barsamian on NPR occasionally, or on our community FM station, KBMF-LP.

Lydon introduced Chomsky as "the scientist who taught us to think of human language as something embedded in our biology, not a social acquisition; he's the humanist who railed against the Vietnam War and other projections of American power, on moral grounds first, ahead of practical considerations. He remains a rock star on college campuses, here and abroad, and he's become a sort of North Star for the post-Occupy generation that today refuses to feel the Bern-out."

I'm extracting from Lydon's interview three major "truths" Chomsky imparted when he was asked to provide listeners "a brief summary of what challenges this generation faces."

Chomsky imparted three big ideas. First, since 1945 humanity has been developing nuclear technology "to the point where it would lead to terminal disaster." He recalled that the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists inaugurated its famous Doomsday Clock in 1947, it's clock's minute hand placed seven minutes to midnight.

Chomsky recalled, although not recognized in 1947, "we now understand that at the end of the Second World War the world also entered into a new geological epoch. It's called the Anthropocene, the epoch in which humans have a severe, in fact maybe disastrous impact on the environment." It was this new scientific knowledge that caused the Bulletin's editors to once more call attention to the ever-present danger of human extinction, moving the hand back toward Doomsday in 2015.

Chomsky then added, "Immediately after the Trump election, in late January of this year, the clock was moved again to two and a half minutes to midnight, the closest it's been since 1953." The implication is that the leader of history's greatest empire wields the power to eliminate the human race in two ways!

"So, there's the two existential threats that we've created," said Chomsky, "which might in the case of nuclear war maybe wipe us out; in the case of environmental catastrophe, create a severe impact—and then some."

Chomsky continued, "A third thing happened. Beginning around the 1970s, human intelligence dedicated itself to eliminating, or at least weakening, the main barrier against these threats. It's called neoliberalism."

Chomsky's point must be driven home. During the 1970s, during the era of Nixon, Ford and Carter, very smart economists, corporate leaders, and politicians invented an ideology we refer to as neoliberalism. Neoliberalism is an ideology that has the power to weaken or eliminate "the main barrier" saving humanity from extinction.

What occurred during the 1970s?

The leading capitalist countries of the US and Great Britain transitioned from "what some people call 'regimented capitalism,'" and others, social democracy, of the 1950s and 1960s, the great growth period in Euro-American economies. A period of "egalitarian growth, a lot of advances in social justice . . . sometimes called "the golden age of modern capitalism."

During the 1970s, that period of egalitarian growth ended. That decade saw, according to Chomsky, "the onset of the neoliberal era that we've been living in since. And if you ask yourself what this era is, its crucial principle is undermining mechanisms of social solidarity and mutual support and popular engagement in determining policy."

Neoliberal ideology redefined "freedom." Today, says Chomsky, "freedom means a subordination to the decisions of concentrated, unaccountable, private power. The institutions of governance, or other kinds of association that could allow people to participate in decision making, have been systematically weakened. Margaret Thatcher, the most outspoken voice of neoliberalism, said it rather nicely in her aphorism about "there being no society, only individuals."

Neoliberalism destroyed or undermined the governing mechanisms by which people participated in democratic societies after 1945. Unions and other forms of popular association were undermined. Social and political decisions were transferred to unaccountable private power all disguised in a rhetoric of freedom. Guaranteeing free markets for multinational corporations replaced expanding citizens' rights.

What's Cooking

Shepherders Hors d'oeuvres

By Debbie Sorensen

Last weekend we were visiting with family and friends who had just come out of elk camp south of Livingston. Conversation flowed freely as snacks and beverages were consumed.

Stories soon turned to unforgettable appetizers. One unusual creation was brought up by my brother-in-law Bruce. We laughed as he recounted the surprise with which we were introduced to "Bill Seward's Finest" at The Jersey Lilly Bar and Café in Ingomar, Montana.

Since The Jersey Lilly was touted as being internationally famous for their baked beans and steaks, that was what we ordered. We knew we were in for something special when Mr. Seward himself, served up the hors d'oeuvres. His signature headgear was an old white navy cap. A sturdy string went from a button on the top of the cap to the nose piece of black horn-rimmed glasses, holding the specs on his face. Because he had been a boxer and his nose had been bashed so many times, glasses would not stay in the usual place, hence the string.

Located in Rosebud County about 36 miles N/W of Forsyth, The Jersey Lilly was the hot spot in that town and area. In the early 1900's Ingomar was considered the sheep shearing and wool shipping capital of the world. The population at the time we visited was about 15-20 folks.

The service was unforgettable. The ingredients for the hors d'oeuvres were served separately on tin plates. The diners were instructed to build their own. So, we did. We had fun talking about the old-timers and what they would have served up. Crackers, cheese and onions may have been staples. Oranges could have been a treat that would have boosted the ordinary fare, to a new culinary level. We were thankful and delighted to engage in such a memorable evening.

Wishing you, your family and friends blessings for this Thanksgiving. Perhaps you will find a special way to boost your ordinary fare to something extraordinary.

Shepherders Hors d'oeuvres

- 18 saltine crackers (or savory crackers)
- 18 orange slice quarters (peeled)

- 18 slices of cheese
- 18 thin onion slices

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

During Holidays, Be Extra Vigilant About Protecting Financial Data

To help achieve your long-term goals, such as a comfortable retirement, you should save and invest regularly. But that's only part of the picture. You also need to protect your financial assets in various ways. One such method is guarding your personal information – especially any information that could be linked to your financial accounts. It's obviously important to be vigilant at any time, but you need to be even more on your toes during the holiday season, when fraudsters are particularly active.

So, to help keep your important data under wraps during the holidays, consider these suggestions:

Extend your protection to all mobile devices. Identity thieves can now compromise your mobile devices by installing spyware that steals usernames, passwords and credit card information. Fortunately, you can fight back. By doing a little research online, you can find the best mobile security software for your needs.

Use multiple passwords. Online security specialists recommend that you use different passwords for each new online shopping site you visit during the holiday season. Although this might seem like a hassle, it can be helpful, because even if identity thieves were to grab one of your new passwords, they still couldn't use it for other sites you may visit. And you can even find a free online program that can help you keep track of all your passwords.

Be suspicious of "huge savings." It happens every holiday season – identity thieves develop fake sites with attractive graphics and stunningly low prices on a variety of items, especially digital devices. If you fall for these pitches, you won't get any merchandise, but you might get a handful of headaches once the bad guys have your credit card number and other personal information. To prevent this, be wary of any deal that sounds too good to be true, and do some digging on the websites that offer these mega-savings.

Watch for fake shipping notices. During the holidays, when you may do a lot of online shopping, you will probably receive some legitimate shipping notices. But the bad guys have gotten pretty good at generating fake notices designed to resemble those from UPS, FedEx and even the U.S. Postal Service. If you were to click on the link provided by one of these bogus notices, you could either take on some malware or get taken to a "phishing" website created by the shipping notice forgers. Your best defense: Only shop with legitimate merchants and only use the tracking numbers given to you in the email you received immediately after making your purchases.

Keep your Social Security number to yourself. As a general rule, don't give out your Social Security number online — to anyone. No legitimate retailer needs this number. Finally, be aware that not all attempts at stealing your personal information will come online. When you're out shopping at old-fashioned, brick-and-mortar stores, consider bringing just one credit card with you — and protect that card from prying eyes.

By following these precautions, you should be able to greatly reduce the risk of being victimized by identity thieves and other miscreants. And the more comfortable you are in doing your holiday shopping, the more you can enjoy the season.

Winter Exercise Challenges

We work hard to establish an exercise routine and to get in the shape. It is not easy; but falling out of that routine can be. The weather gets cold and the sidewalks and paths get icy. The holidays arrive with many extra demands on our time. How can we stick to our work-out regimen this time of year?

A good start is to go back to the suggestions from my column relative to easing stress during the holidays, including examining our to-do list and paring it down where possible. It starts by avoiding that feeling of being overwhelmed and managing our time. Keep your cardio and strength conditioning a priority and you will have the energy and stamina to beautifully manage all you have to do this holiday season.

By now you most likely have a time set aside for exercise, whether it is first thing in the morning, during your lunch hour, or any time you have set for your schedule. A good rule is to stick to that work-out time like glue to preserve not only your fitness level, but also your sanity during this busy time of year.

Next, if your workouts are typically outside, as mine are, take a minute to come up with a plan B. Some of our lifestyle-class participants head out to the mall or Civic Center and take their walking inside. Others have aerobic, Yoga and/or weight routines on DVD or on-line so they can stay at home and in shape.

Even without a pre-recorded workout, with a little creativity, there is plenty we can do without leaving home. Walking or running up and down the stairs a few times can be a warm-up, or part of an interval routine - moderate activity mixed with more intense activity. Putting on your favorite music and dancing around the house is a fun and good exercise. You can even mix some household chores up with the dancing without missing a beat.

If you want resistance exercise and have not yet invested in weights, use soup cans or milk jugs, partially or fully filled with water. Your own body weight is all the resistance you need for building strength with crunches, push-ups (modified or full), planks, lunges, squats, tricep presses and more.

If you enjoy exercising at home and could use some equipment, this is a great time to put your favorites on your Christmas list. A stability ball is fun and a good place to start. An exercise band is inexpensive and very versatile. Both can be used while watching televisions or movies, or as part of a well-rounded workout. You may already have an exercise bike, stepper or treadmill. If not, put a new one on your wish list, or look for one second-hand.

If you belong to a gym or are thinking of joining one, this is the perfect time of year to take advantage of all the opportunities there: classes, pools, racquet sports, cardio machines and every type of weight equipment. Whatever you choose, give yourself the gift of health and wellness and you will be in prime shape to stay on top of extra responsibilities and enjoy the holidays as well!

Carousel Corner

Larry Hoffman

Our Carousel progress is now daily, with multiple people working on several fronts. It is a wonderful change from months where almost nothing was getting done week after week, except by Bob Foley and Tom Davies who were nearly always there every Monday and Friday, even in the bitter cold, working on the wiring.

Since Mike Sawicki and Mason Masters began as contractors, all the other aspects of construction have fallen into place and started moving forward. Of course, having heat in the building makes a huge difference, too. Last week is an excellent example.

With all of the walls and ceilings taped, textured, and primed, splashes of color are appearing and interior details are getting started.

The Exchange Club had a big crew out in old clothes and coveralls to attack painting with a vengeance, along with Suzanne Masters and her friends, Sharon Verbeck Arends, and the Tom Ortega family.

Boy Scout troop 1608, with Keanen Fitzpatrick, Nathan Ortega, Lewis and Thomas Icopini, along with parents Tom and Jeanine Ortega and Gary Icopini, were there to work on their Eagle Scout project, replica Columbia Gardens benches.

I'm not there all the time, so if I left someone out, let me know. All volunteers should sign up on the sheet on the front wall to get credit where it is due.

Petritz Urethane was there blowing insulation into the ceilings, which will make a huge difference in what it has been costing to keep the bers of the zoning board expressed concerns that meeting all the permit conditions will be expensive and that the location may cause problems for businesses and residents in the area. However, the board's chairman, Dave Wing, said that if the Mission fails to meet all of the conditions, the permit could be revoked.

Board member Rocko Mulcahy made the motion to approve the permit, saying that finding a site for a homeless shelter is "a real humanitarian challenge" and that the Rescue Mission's proposal strikes a better balance than previous proposed locations at the old Madison School or the old Homeward Bound building.

The board voted 5-1 to approve the Rescue Mission's permit.

Living United: What does it mean?

By Juliann T. Crnich,
Executive Director-United Way of Butte & Anaconda

For United Way of Butte and Anaconda it means "Uniting our communities in assessing and addressing our most vital human needs and to strengthen our collective ability to care for one another".

This month I will highlight the work of Butte 4-C's (Community Coordinated Child Care).

The Butte 4-C's began serving children and families in 1974. The purpose of the organization, at that time, was to coordinate, develop and upgrade child and youth programs through an inter-agency, inter community body consisting of parents, civic groups and both public and private agencies.

Since their beginning they have expanded their services to include: child care resource & referral (the only child care resource and referral agency in SW Montana), the Child and Adult Care Food Program, home visiting, supervised visitation, Grandparents Raising Grandchildren support group, Circle of Parents Support Group and parenting classes.

They strongly believe that early care and education is a community issue and they have taken a comprehensive approach to providing professional development resources to child care providers in an effort to improve quality child care facilities.

United Way of Butte and Anaconda funds two programs for the 4-C's. The Quality Early Care program will provide a series of training on I am Moving I am Learning, which is the Office of Head Start's national obesity prevention program. The Positive Parenting Program offers parenting classes to all families in Silver Bow County at no cost. This program provides valuable and relevant information regarding issues parents encounter as they learn and grow with their child in today's world.

"United Way is a key community partner working collaboratively with organizations like ours to provide education and resources to children, families and educators. We are very thankful for their ongoing support! They make a big difference in our community!"

Brenda Hergott

Contributions can be mailed to PO Box 4447 Butte MT 59702 or online at www.uwbutteanaconda.org. Help United Way fight for the health, education and financial stability of every person in our communities. LIVE UNITED

CHC selected to participate in behavioral health initiative

The Southwest Montana Community Health Center has been chosen to participate in a project to identify teenagers who are at risk for addiction and refer them to treatment.

Called the Facilitating Change for Excellence in Screening, Brief Intervention and Referral to Treatment (SBIRT) initiative, it gives primary care providers the tools they need to offer preventative anticipatory guidance and identify adolescents who are using substances. It allows the practice to apply brief interventions to reduce risky use and refer youth in need of specialty addiction treatment if appropriate.

"From our community needs assessments, we know that the people of Butte are concerned about the level of substance use in teenagers and adults," said Jennifer Malone, CEO of the SWTMCHC. "This prestigious project will help us tackle this issue and assist teenagers and their families who are struggling with this issue."

With support from the Conrad N. Hilton Foundation and contribution from esteemed national experts, the National Council for Behavioral Health developed the standardized implementation model which has been adopted by the SWMTCHC.

"If we can identify a teen at risk for addiction, we are potentially saving a life and a family from a life of suffering," said Linda Rosenberg, president and CEO of the National Council for Behavioral Health. "Training primary care practitioners to screen and to identify and to intervene early as a routine part of their practice gives them a chance to do what they do best - helping young people grow into healthy adults."

The SWMTCHC was one of 15 federally qualified health centers nationwide selected to pilot the initiative through an 18-month learning collaborative.

"No Greater Love" film showing Dec. 2

A free showing of the movie version of last summer's production of "No Greater Love," a musical telling the story of Butte's Granite Mountain/Speculator mining disaster of 1917, will kick off the release of DVD and CD versions of the musical drama.

The DVD will be shown Saturday, Dec. 2 at 7 p.m. at the Butte High School Auditorium. No admission will be charged, but free will donations will be taken to support local homeless agencies.

The board of No Greater Love, LLC commissioned professionally produced DVD and CD versions of the production, which was presented last June at the Mother Lode Theater. The two versions will be packaged as a set and marketed through the Butte Archives. Distribution rights for the CDs and DVDs will be turned over to the Friends of the Archives, who will be able to use the proceeds for future cultural events related to Butte history.

At the film screening, board members are expected to announce that the remaining proceeds from last June's production will be distributed to the Granite Mountain Memorial, the World Museum of Mining and the Orphan Girl Theater.

This Week In Labor History November 8th - November 14th

"Radical action must be taken to do away with the efforts of arrogant and selfish greed on the part of the Capitalist."
- President Teddy Roosevelt, Progressive Republican, Progressive Party founder

Wednesday, Nov 22:

"The Uprising of the 20,000." Led by 19 year old Clara Lemlich, over 20,000 female garment workers go strike in New York; a Judge tells arrested pickets: "You are on strike against God!" The first major successful strike by female workers in American history, ended in February with Union contracts bringing a reduction in work hours to 52 hours per week and better pay. (...and God was pleased.) -1909
President John F. Kennedy is assassinated. A friend of Labor, Kennedy a year earlier had issued Executive Order 10988, which authorized Unionization and collective bargaining rights for federal workers. Many states would later follow the example set by Kennedy. -1963

Thursday, Nov 23:

Army troops, paid by mine owners, were sent to Cripple Creek, Colorado to crush striking WFM coal miners and protect profits. 600 WFM Union members were thrown into a military bullpen, and held for weeks without charges. When a lawyer arrived with a writ of habeas corpus, General Bell, who led the repression, responded "Habeas corpus, hell! We'll give 'em post mortems!" When miners complained that the imprisonment was a violation of their constitutional rights, one anti-Union/pro-Capitalist judge replied, "To hell with the Constitution; we're not following the Constitution!" (The "radical" WFM Union was founded in Butte Montana and would become instrumental in the founding of the IWW) -1903
Workers employed at Walmart, the nation's largest private-sector employer, strike nationwide for better wages and working conditions. Walmart, whose net sales in 2011 were 443.9 billion, pays its 1.4 million workers in the U.S. an average of 8.81/hour. A third of Walmart's workers are forced to rely of Government assistance. -2012

Friday, Nov 24:

Anna Louise Strong born on this day, Seattle, Washington, labor activist, author. During the Everett Massacre Strong was hired by the New York Evening Post to report on the bloody conflict between the Industrial Workers of the World (or "Wobblies") and the army of armed private guards hired by Everett mill owners to protect profits. She soon became an impassioned and articulate spokesperson for workers' rights. -1885
Mollie Steimer, Unionist, anti-war activist, free-speech campaigner, sentenced to 15-year in prison for handing out pro-peace leaflets, is deported to Soviet Russia. A victim of the Red Scare in America, she was soon a victim of the Red Terror in Russia. -1921

Saturday, Nov 25:

Amid a strike for Union recognition by 395,000 steelworkers, 250 American workers accused of "Communism" were deported to Russia during America's first "Red Scare". The Red Scare became an important tool of greedy Capitalists who used peoples fear to crush Union activity and protect profits. -1919
Teachers strike in St. Paul, Minn., the first organized walkout by teachers in the country. The month-long "Strike for Better Schools" involving 1,100 teachers and principals, led to a number of reforms in the way schools were administered and operated. -1946

Sunday, Nov 26:

4 months before the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire, a sweatshop in Newark, New Jersey, catches fire, killing at least 24 women and girls. 6 young women burn to death and 19 more die when they leap from the fourth-story windows. The fire made national news and more than 100,000 people flocked to the scene the next day. The only door from which the women could flee was locked to protect company profits. A coroner's jury a month later deemed the fire the result of human error: "They died from misadventure and accident." -1910

Death of Paul Lafargue, French revolutionary Socialist. He wrote the book "The Right to Be Lazy" about the importance of leisure in 1893 while in prison. -1911

Monday, Nov 27:

In West Virginia, during a UMW coal miners' strike Governor Cornwell proclaims martial law in Mingo County to protect mine owner profits and interests. -1920
The pro-labor musical revue, "Pins & Needles," opens on Broadway with a cast of Int'l Ladies Garment Workers Union members. Rehearsals were held at night and on weekends, and performances were all on Fridays and Saturdays to appease their bosses (i.e., keep their jobs). It ran for 1,108 performances before closing. In 1962, a 25th anniversary edition of the score was released featuring Barbra Streisand. -1937

Tuesday, Nov 28:

National Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, precursor to IBEW, founded. The IBEW currently represents more than 750,000 members in utilities, construction, telecommunications, broadcasting, manufacturing, railroads and government. Today, the IBEW conducts apprenticeship programs under the auspices of the National Joint Apprenticeship and Training Committee (NJATC), which allows apprentices to "earn while you learn." -1891
In the wake of years of Free Market outsourcing and downsizing, Bell-Atlantic announced another 5,600 lay-offs. In response, 1,200 employees in Pennsylvania came to work in T-shirts that portrayed themselves as road kill on the information super-highway. Management suspended them all without pay when they refused to remove the shirts. -1994

'Bundle of Butte' winner announced

Mainstreet Uptown Butte has announced the winner of The Holiday Open House Bundle of Butte drawing.

With the Uptown Open House last Sunday, the contest has ended but shoppers are encouraged to return to Uptown businesses now that the holiday shopping season is in full swing.

"The true winners are the customers who get to enjoy exploring Uptown Butte for gift ideas throughout the holiday season," said George Everett, Executive Director of Mainstreet Uptown Butte.

The grand prize winner is Jean Cannada. Cannada's name was drawn from a pool of about 300 entries collected from participating Uptown businesses.

She wins the Bundle of Butte prize package that includes several premiums donated by Uptown stores to represent the variety of products and services available to customers. The premiums donated by more than 15 local businesses, worth more than $700 include -- 5518 Designs, 27 N. Main St. -- custom hat and T-shirt Beautiful Butte and Beyond, 21 N. Main St. -- custom hat and T-shirt
Butte Stuff, 55 W. Park Street -- Cutting board with Butte motif
Cavanaugh's County Celtic, 131 W. Park Street -- elf ornaments

Second Edition Books, 112 S. Montana St. -- New book
Twisted Designs, 47 W. Park St., Montana Domino necklace
Whitehead's Cutlery, 73 E. Park Street -- New hunting knife

To register to win, shoppers were invited to shop and enter their names at participating Uptown businesses.

Four other winners were also chosen to receive consolation gifts of Uptown Bucks for taking time to enter and for shopping in Uptown Butte for the holidays.

The focus now shifts to the upcoming Small Business Saturday, November 25th, Cider Monday (November 27th) and the Stroll coming on Friday, December 1st. For details about these events, visit www.mainstreetbutte.org or facebook.com/uptownbutte or stop in to an Uptown business and ask for details.

Then, on the following weekend, plans are in the works for the 17th Annual Ice Sculpting Contest on Saturday December 9 with Breakfast with Santa at Metals Sports Bar & Grill.

building warm in our Butte fall (read normal early winter) weather.

Mike and Mason finished putting up all fiberglass reinforced panels in the concession area and restrooms, so we are ready for JS Plumbing to install the fixtures and turn on the inside water.

Ron Kissock was there continuing with his electrical work.

Now that all the ceiling-panel work is complete, Nichols Sheet Metal will go back next week and work toward completing the last of the heat duct and furnace installation. Also I will have a couple of young mining student volunteers there to re-install the central ventilation fan that was removed to find leaks.

Okay, here is the big news: With steady progress we are now willing to stick our necks out and say we are aiming to be have our Carousel ready to ride for Saint Patrick's Day!

Montana's tumultuous statehood year captured in new history

The Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives will continue its Brown Bag Lunch series on Wednesday, November 29, with a presentation and book signing by Ken Egan Jr. entitled Montana 1889. The year Montana became a state comes alive in Ken Egan Jr.'s new book, a vivid description of the people and politics swirling through Montana during that crucial time. Insightful and compelling, Egan's new book makes a worthy sequel to his "Montana 1864," the highly acclaimed history about Montana's territorial year.

Egan, executive director of Humanities Montana in Missoula, said he was struck by the changes between those years. "It was one of the most rapid and dramatic transformations of land and peoples in United States history," Egan said.

Between 1864 and 1889, the buffalo were exterminated, the Indian wars ended, tribal nations were confined to reservations, cattle and sheep by the tens of thousands grazed the open range, Butte exploded into a city with electricity and millionaires, and multiple railroads connected Montana to the world.

"Montana 1889" tells the many stories of this overwhelming transformation by entering into the lives, emotions, and decisions of Indians, miners, cowboys, women, and entrepreneurs who were cooperating and competing in the new state. Calling Egan's book "the best kind of history," Robert R. Swartout, Jr., professor emeritus of history at Carroll College in Helena, said Egan is "one of the most gifted Montana historians of our generation."

The presentation will begin at noon and run about an hour at the Archives, 17 W. Quartz St. Guests are encouraged to bring a sack lunch. Coffee and water will be provided. Brown Bag Lunches are held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Upcoming lectures will focus topics of local interest. For more information, contact the Archives at 782-3280.
