Butte Plaza Mall chosen as site for new call center

By Robin Jordan

A new call center that could employ up to 350 people is coming to the Butte Plaza Mall, officials said last week.

An Oregon-based company, FCR, which provides outsourced live agent call centers and business process solution, first announced plans to locate a call center in Butte last November. On Monday, Jan. 7, Mall officials learned that the deal was official and the call center will move into the former JC Penney location at the southeast end of the Mall.

FCR operates six contact centers in Oregon and one center in Great Falls as well as international locations in Mexico and Poland. The Great Falls center was opened in June 2017 and now employs 250 people, with plans to expand further in 2019. FCR plans to bring as many as 350 new jobs to Butte, including supervisory and management positions. Butte will be their 9th call center. The company will offer customer service and technical support jobs answering telephone calls, emails, text messages and social media communications for a variety of companies and industries.

Alana Ferko, manager of the Butte Plaza Mall, said details are fluid at this point, but the company will bring engineers and architects this week to begin modifying the 28,000 square-foot space for the new center. Few changes will be needed, she said, but the company will install communications wiring as well as cubicles and work stations. The center should open this spring, she said, initially hiring 100 people and expanding later to 350 positions.

Ferko said the call center is great news for the Mall, which has suffered the loss of a number of large retailers in recent years, including Herbergers department store, which closed last August. The problem isn't confined to Butte; shopping malls have suffered nationally as major retailers have gone bankrupt or restructured, eliminating or scaling back their numbers of brick-and-mortar locations. The new call center should bring new energy to the Mall, she said, as well as new opportunities.

"We know a mixed-use concept is key to our success," Ferko said. "This should open doors—the improvements should cause others to look at the possibilities of the Mall. We have the best location on Harrison Avenue. This will be the first of more good things to come."

Ferko is part of the Butte-Silver Bow Economic Team, a group that includes local government and other private and public economic development agen-

George Street residents still plagued by traffic woes

By Robin Jordan

Residents along a narrow section of George Street told Butte-Silver Bow commissioners last week that despite a change that designated the portion of the road as one-way, motorists are still driving aggressively, ignoring stop signs and even travelling the wrong way.

Mark Mariano, who lives on Whitman Ave., next to George St., sent a letter to commissioners in December saying that traffic problems along the stretch between Oregon and Phillips Avenues have continued in the months since the street was designated as one-way. Mariano told the council's public works committee last week that residents would like George St. to be blocked off, perhaps by a locked gate at Gaylord St. to prevent the road being used as a thoroughfare between Montana St. and Harrison Ave.

In his letter, Mariano said he installed a closed-circuit camera in September to record traffic at the intersection of George St. and Whitman Ave. On a typical day, he said, about 400 vehicles travel through that intersection.

"Cross-town motorists are clearly frustrated to be slowed to 15 mph and stopping at every block, causing aggressive driving where most drivers speed through and do not stop at stop signs," he wrote. "On top of that, on a typical day, more than 5 people drive the wrong way. On Sept. 25th, of the 388 cars that drove through the intersection of Whitman and George Streets, only 23 came to a complete stop at the stop sign. Of the 365 people who ran the stop sign, 169 blew right through it with barely a tap on the brakes! This is a typical day on George Street. I was surprised to also see Butte-Silver Bow vehicles blowing the stop sign and going the wrong way."

Mariano said one problem in the area is signage. There is only one wrong-way sign at Phillips St. at the east end of the section, and several one-way signs are placed high on the poles, above the street name signs. Because of this, motorists coming into the middle of the section are unlikely to notice that it is one-way going east, he said.

He said residents are concerned that construction of a new park in the nearby Diggings East area will bring even more traffic to George St. He suggested perhaps park plans could be altered to build a parking lot to block the street at Gaylord St. and through traffic could be rerouted to Casey, Cobban or Marcia Streets nearby.

Commissioner Brendan McDonough said it is unlikely Atlantic Richfield would consider altering its plans for the park to close the road. He and other members of the public works committee suggested area residents separate their concerns about local traffic from the issue of the future park.

Commissioner Dan Callahan said motorists

For decades, Butte and Anaconda kids have disliked each other.

When it comes to Butte guys and Anaconda guys, however, it is a completely different story.

While the Maroons and Bulldogs have had long, bitter rivalries with the Copperheads, they usually form a pretty good bond when they graduate and go to college.

You better believe that if there is a group of guys fighting Butte guys in a bar in Missoula, Great Falls, Bozeman or Billings, it is almost a given that some Anaconda guys will be fighting alongside their friends from the Mining City.

You also better believe that the Butte-Anaconda combo is almost always going to win. A Butte-Anaconda one-two punch has long been bad news for any competition.

Anaconda and Butte has always had kind of a sibling rivalry. I can

BUTTE SPORTS

Butte-Anaconda union is bad news for competition beat him up, but you better keep your damn hands off him.

My first fray into the Butte-Anaconda rivalry came as I was lying on my back on a field just west of Anaconda's Mitchell Stadium. A dirty Anaconda player was pointing down at me and laughing.

I was playing defensive line for Butte Central in a seventh grade game, and the Anaconda offensive lineman grabbed my facemask as I popped out of my three-point stance. He twisted my neck and spun me to the ground and onto my back.

I could not decide what was more egregious. Was it that the officials did not call the holding or that they did not call the facemasking? Or was it that the Copperhead was laughing at me because he knew he could get away dirty play all game long in Anaconda?

Realizing that the officials were not watching the trenches very well, I came fighting back on the next play. I jumped up at the snap of the ball and hit the Anaconda player near the shoulder with my left hand. I delivered an uppercut to his belly with my right.

We battled back and forth like this until Brody Kelly hit Cam McQueary for a long touchdown pass to win the game in the final seconds.

Two years later, I played 30 to 40 seconds a game on the freshman basketball team. I played just long enough against the Copperheads for a giant Anaconda player to give me a forearm in the face.

In perfect timing, the ball bounced right into my hands right as the players started walking down to the other end of the court because of the foul called on Anaconda's goon.

I turned around and all I could see through the blurry eyes was the back of his big, dumb head. I threw that ball as hard as I could. My aim was a little low, and I hit him between the shoulders.

He turned around with his dukes up, but the referee stepped between us to stop a fist fight on the Civic Center floor.

The rest of the night – during the junior varsity and varsity games – I was sure to take a friend with me every time I went to the restroom or concession stand.

That Anaconda player, who looked like an super-sized version of the fat kid from Bad Santa, promised he was going to kick butt in the postgame handshake.

Then he and his tiny friend kept glaring down at me from the Anaconda student section. They were repeatedly pounding their right fists into their left hands – the universal sign that “you're dead meat.”

Bus trips to Anaconda were always full of mostly-embellished stories about the great rivalries of the past. We talked about bus windows being busted out. We even heard stories about busses being tipped over on their side, and we believed them.

By far the best thing about going to Anaconda was relief of making it back out of town safely.

By the time golf season rolled around in the spring of my freshman year, I realized that Anaconda guys were not all bad when our team shared a bus with the Copperheads for road trips.

By the time I got to college at the University of Montana, I realized Anaconda guys were pretty much just like Butte guys.

We basically came from the same hard-nosed mining background. We had the same super-fund stigma that the rest of the state looks down on. We talked alike. We thought alike. For the most part, we voted alike.

The older we get, the stronger the bond gets between Butte and Anaconda. Some of the best men and women I have ever known are former Copperheads.

Even that goon I threw the basketball at turned out to be a pretty good guy.

Now, Butte Central and Anaconda are in talks about joining forces to form one football team. They could also co-op in wrestling, softball, golf or any other sport that is in jeopardy of fading away because of a lack of numbers.

The odds of that happening are at best 50/50 because there is some pushback on both sides.

There are a lot of logistic problems that could stop such a merger. The biggest obstacle, though, is pride.

After decades of strongly disliking each other, how can Copperheads and Maroons come together to play football?

The thing is, a merger in football and other sports is not going to end the Butte Central-Anaconda rivalry. That rivalry, which had not been near the level it used to be over the last 20 years the Maroons and Copperheads played, is already over.

Anaconda is in its fourth year playing in the Class B, and the Copperheads and Maroons have not met on the gridiron since 2014.

Butte High has not played Anaconda in football since the 1980s. The Bulldogs and Copperheads have not met on the basketball court since Anaconda moved down from the Class A.

The familiarity that will come from the Copperheads and Maroons combining on the football field might even add to the rivalries in other sports. That seems to be the case with longtime rivals Drummond and Philipsburg, who combined to form the 8-man powerhouse that are the Flint Creek Titans.

The cold, hard truth is that the Butte Central and Anaconda football numbers are getting too low to consistently compete at any level of 11-man football.

According to the latest numbers by the Montana High School Association, Anaconda has 321 students. Butte Central has 133.

If you add BC's numbers to Anaconda's, you would have 454 students to choose from. That would put the combined schools as the 12th biggest school in the Class A.

While I would much rather see Butte Central players co-op with Butte High for football, we all know will see Donald Trump give Nancy Pelosi a five-second Frencher long before we ever see the Bulldogs and Maroons come together.

A union of Butte Central and Anaconda just might be the last chance to keep these two storied football traditions alive. It will have the added benefit of starting a new one.

Another added bonus would be that the rest of the state absolutely hates this idea.

They know that Butte and Anaconda joining forces has long been bad news for the competition.

Carousel Corner

By Jim Ayers

We are now into the middle of January. The Carousel has resumed normal winter hours 2 p.m. until 6 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and noon until 6 on weekends. We are closed on Monday, which is a great day to do any needed maintenance and repairs.

We weren't able to get as much done as we had hoped over the two week break. The limited hours that volunteers were available slowed our progress. The band organ surround didn't get finished but we made a good start. The good news is that mechanically we were in pretty good shape already. Don Sundberg and Ed Curran updated all the bearings during our normal operating hours, working on Mondays and in the early mornings. Marilyn Mason is working on the paintings for the floor panels (the enclosure that surrounds the mechanics). She has three done and hopes to get the other seven done soon.

The Carousel Gala will be this weekend. If you didn't get your tickets already it's too late. We sold out again this year. We did limit the tickets that were available in hopes of avoiding the overcrowded conditions of last year. We also moved back to the Star Lanes Event Center. The experienced Gala Committee ladies, Michelle Brenneck, Marilyn Patrick, Jodel Petroni, Betty Babb and Christine Mayer along with some new volunteers, Kaitlyn McGrath, Vonnie Brown, Barb Lisac, Jeanne Hunter, and Karen Dolson have put together another winner this year. They are a "Her"ricane of a crew. I attended a few of the planning meetings and quickly learned to stay out of their way. These ladies have it down and I am sure that the lucky people who attend this year's event will agree.

I was visiting with a young man the other night and was surprised to find out that although he had taken his children ages 7 and 9 to the water park and the new Stodden playground they had never stopped into the Carousel. I didn't want to put him on the spot so I didn't ask why. My concern is that he didn't realize how affordable a visit to the Carousel is. With just a couple of dollars you can ride the carousel and get a bag of popcorn. The Carousel is truly one of the most affordable activities you can do with children. When my children were little we often picnicked at Clark's Park. I am sure that we would have had a great time at the carousel and that it would have been one of our regular stops. The point of all this is that anyone can afford a visit to the carousel, so please do yourself and your children a great favor and visit the carousel soon.

The Carousel is located at 3105 Utah Street in Stodden Park. To make a memorial or to donate our mailing address is PO Box 4133, Butte, MT 59702. If you would like to talk to someone our phone number is 406-494-7775.

What's Keeping You From Protecting Your Family's Future?

Think about your loved ones. What will their future be like? Can you picture them living in your house many years from now? Can you picture your children going to college? Can you picture your spouse or partner enjoying a comfortable retirement? These are all pleasant visions – but what if you weren't in these pictures?

Unfortunately, a lot of people don't – even when they recognize the need. LIMRA and Life Happens, two organizations that provide education on life insurance, report the following:

Only four in 10 Americans own an individual life insurance policy – although 85% say that most people need life insurance.

More than one-third of all households report that they would feel an adverse financial impact within one month of losing a primary wage earner's income, while nearly half would feel an impact in just six months.

What's keeping people from providing adequate insurance for their families? Here's a sampling of the most common reasons:

"I just don't want to think about it." Let's face it – like almost everybody, you probably don't like to think about death. And consequently, you may well be inclined to postpone thinking about life insurance. But if you can just envision what your loved ones' lives would be like without you, in terms of their financial situation, you will find it easier to address your insurance needs in a calmer, more analytical manner.

"I have other financial priorities." You will always have financial obligations – mortgage or rent payments, car payments, credit card bills, student loans, etc. You can't ignore these expenses, but ask yourself this: Do any of them really take priority over the future happiness and welfare of your loved ones? Since the answer to this question is obviously "no," you will likely conclude that maintaining adequate life insurance is one of the most important financial moves you can make.

"I can't afford life insurance." If you think life insurance is prohibitively expensive, you're not alone.

In fact, 80% of consumers think life insurance costs more than it does, according to LIMRA and Life Happens, while nearly half of the "millennial" generation estimates the cost at five times more than the actual amount. In reality, some types of life insurance, such as term insurance, is highly affordable.

"I don't know how much insurance I'll need." To determine an appropriate level of coverage, you'll need to consider a variety of factors, such as the number and age of your dependents, size of your mortgage, spousal income, amount of employer-provided insurance, and so on. A financial professional can help you calculate the amount of protection you need.

As you can see, none of the reasons listed above should really keep you from adding life insurance to your overall financial strategy. So, take action soon to help ensure that your wishes for your family's future will become reality.

Christmas decoration battle on again

By Robin Jordan

Christmas was its usual joyful occasion for our little family, with a few gifts, lots of food and, of course, the annual Christmas tree and yard decorations gleaming brightly.

Dave and I were fairly prompt in hauling the decorations from the garage and getting them up, decorating the tree and arranging the lighted figures and strings of lights in the yard by mid-December. This was no mean feat, considering that Discovery Basin opened early this year and Dave was busy most days teaching skiing.

We were acutely aware of last year's problems with ice burying the cords when we set up the yard decorations this year. Dave painstakingly arranged the cords so that they ran along the wall of the house where less snow and ice builds up. He even managed to string some of the cords up above the ground so that they wouldn't be covered with snow that would turn to ice in early January.

We all enjoyed the effect—the little reindeer turned his head back and forth between a bare lilac bush and a lighted spiral tree. Nearby, the Santa bear stood proudly with his little package next to a yard bench, on which perched the angel-dachshund with its silver wings and halo. The lighted five-foot snowman and Santa figures stood against the wall, their cords safe from the ice. Twinkling lights glowed in the low bushes at the front of the yard, looking even more magical when they became covered with a thin blanket of snow.

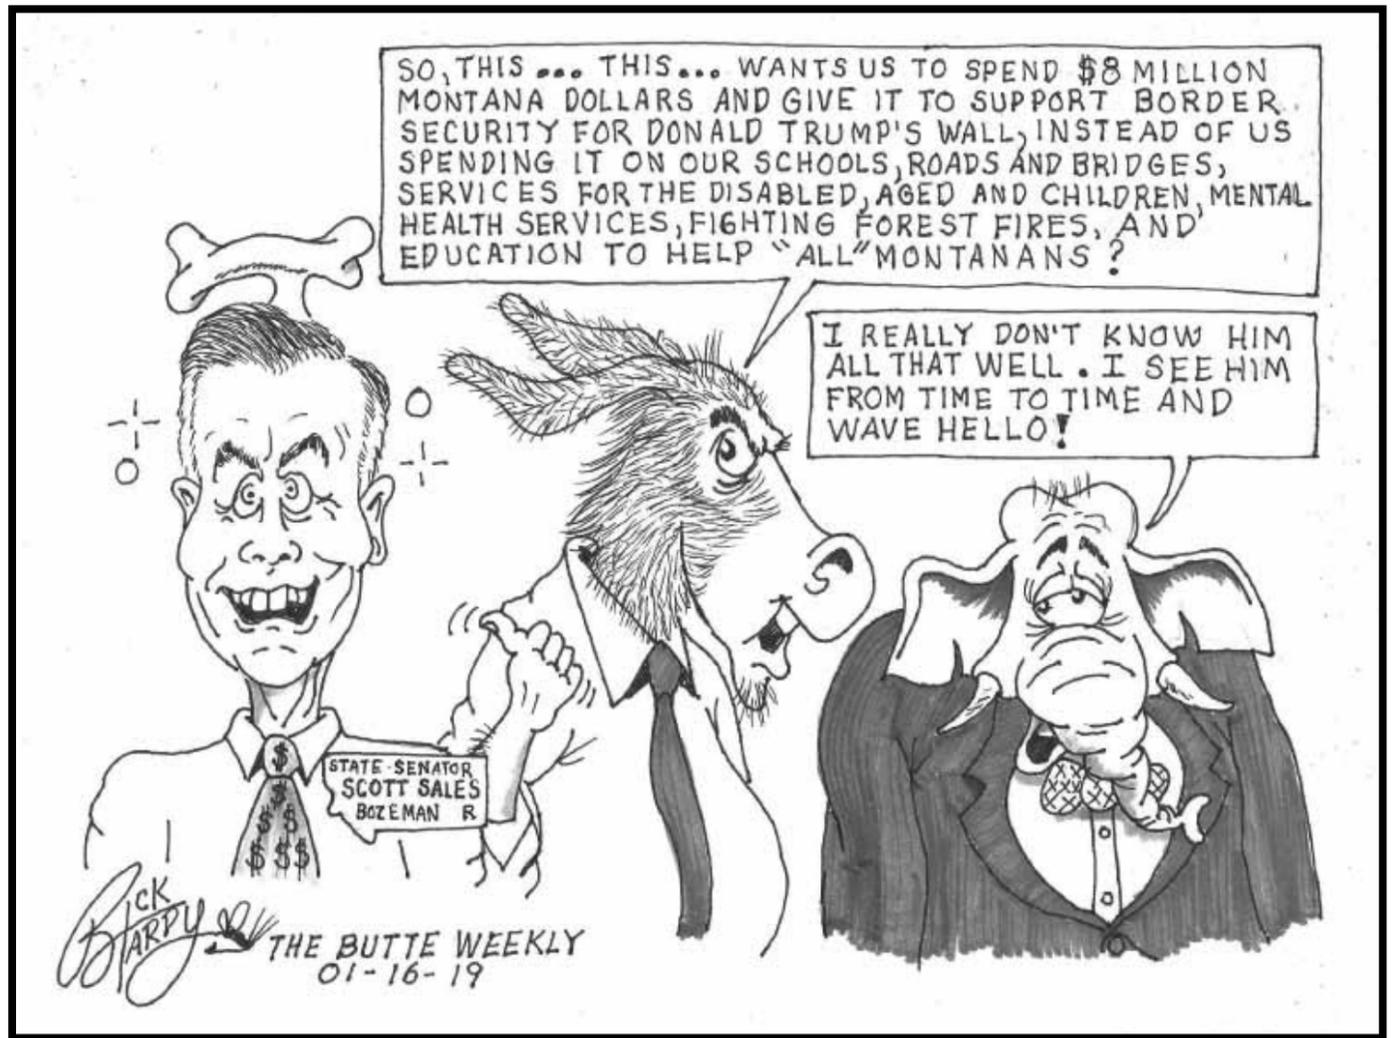

All was well until last week, when we finally decided it was time to take down the tree and pack up the whole menagerie to store away in the garage until next year.

Since we'd had quite a bit of snow that was already piling up in the yard, Dave set out to take down decorations late one afternoon. All was going well for a while—the snowman and Santa were still high and dry and their cords were easily unplugged. The little dog, on his bench, was easily retrieved. However, thanks to our variable weather, the snow around the lighted tree, the bear and the reindeer had been melting and refreezing, so all three were stuck firmly in inches of ice.

Likewise, the lights in the bushes showed no sign of coming loose from what was now a 5-inch blanket of snow and ice.

So, despite all Dave's set-up precautions, we're back where we were last year at this time with Christmas decorations firmly stuck in place in the yard.

Last year, the ice in the yard was so persistent that we didn't manage to get all the decorations free until May. In fact, they couldn't be budged until a few days before Mother's Day. We felt rather silly as Santa and some of the other decorations still stood forlornly as the tulips began to bloom in other sections of the yard.

We're going to keep trying, but I have a sinking feeling the Christmas decorations may be around for a while again this year. Let's hope for an early spring.

Pleasing Putin

By George Waring

Vladimir Putin got a huge Christmas present, didn't he?

He immediately congratulated Trump upon learning that US troops supporting and training the Kurdish forces fighting ISIS in Syria would be immediately withdrawn. Turkey's Authoritarian Erdogan had suggested this desertion of the Kurds during a phone call to Trump on December 14th.

Washington Post reporters DeYoung, Ryan, Dawsey and Jaffe noted Erdogan was following up on the criticisms of US Syrian policy he had earlier made to Trump at the Group of 20 summit in Argentina.

They wrote that Erdogan "repeated his inability to understand why the US was still arming and supporting Syrian Kurdish fighters to conduct a ground war against the Islamic State." Erdogan emphasized that these US supplied and trained Syrian Kurds were a national security threat to Turkey. He reminded Trump that "even the US considered Turkish Kurds terrorists."

Erdogan then reminded Trump of the President's boast in Argentina, that his military policy had eliminated the Islamic State in Syria. At that point, Erdogan told Trump that Turkey's military could clean up any remaining ISIS pockets. He asked,

"Why did some 2,000 U.S. troops still need to be there?"

"You know what? It's yours," Trump said of Syria. "I'm leaving." It was this phone conversation of December 14th that precipitated Defense Secretary James Mattis's resignation on December 20th.

Trump's off-the-cuff agreement with Erdogan was defended by Stephen Miller, a minority of Congressional Republicans, and according to the Post reporters, for Trump his Syria withdrawal was a promise kept. In 2016, Trump had promised he would reduce U.S. commitments overseas. The money saved would "be spent on protecting the homeland, and not in some faraway place that should be able to take care of itself, or at least pay the United States for doing it." This was his "America First" pledge.

"An unmitigated disaster," is how many members of Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, characterized Trump's personal abandonment of the Kurds to please Erdogan. They only learned of Trump's withdrawal from Syria five days later and by Twitter.

According to the Post team, "Most warned that Turkey, whose troops were poised on the border waiting for U.S. forces to leave, would slaughter U.S. Kurdish allies. Overall, they said, it was nothing less than a capitulation to the other two powers on the ground in Syria — Russia and Iran."

In the days after his Friday call with Erdogan, Trump's senior national security team led by John Bolton, "tried, and failed, to get him to reconsider, saying it was the worst possible moment for such an abrupt action."

Five days after his phone call, Trump complained to aides, "that Mattis and others were still trying to dissuade him from the withdrawal. He told them, "Syria costs a fortune," and "for what? What are we getting out of this?"

The Post reporters wrote that this is when Trump's "top White House aide Stephen Miller, one of his most hard-line advisers, had his triumph. "Miller had long told the president that his own defense secretary did not support his 'America First' agenda."

The New York Times Editorial Board responded to General Mattis's resignation on December 22 by emphasizing that Trump's withdrawal of all American troops from Syria was "a decision that was welcome news to Russia, Iran and Turkey," but "it was a bitter betrayal of groups like the Kurds, who have fought and died alongside American soldiers for more than a decade."

The Times credited Mattis with "persuading Mr. Trump not to pull out of NATO" and with working "assure Europe that the United States remained committed to a common defense of the continent."

In Asia, Mattis gave the same assurances to US allies "alarmed at an assertive China and unpredictable North Korea" and at Trump's threats "to withdraw US forces there if Seoul didn't bear a larger share of the basing costs."

It was Mattis who "quietly smothered Trump's cruel ban on transgender troops and a self-aggrandizing military parade with Pentagon bureaucracy." In addition, he "helped delay America's abrogation of the Iran nuclear deal."

However, Mattis was unable to prevent upending decades of Middle East policy by moving the American Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem.

The Atlantic's David Frum wrote, "Trump holds his own word notoriously worthless, and sees no problem in doing the same to the nation's. His America is now disturbingly and mysteriously beholden to cash-rich counterparts: Russia, the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia."

MLK Celebration: Community groups host free screening of 'From Selma to Stonewall'

In celebration of Martin Luther King Day, the Montana Human Rights Network and allied community groups will host a free screening of the documentary "From Selma to Stonewall: Are We There Yet?" The film explores the similarities and differences between the 1960's Civil Rights Movement and efforts for LGBTQ equality. The screening will be on Monday, January 21, 2019, at 6:30 p.m. at the Butte Archives (17 West Quartz Street). Marilyn Bennett, the film's director, will attend, talk about the film, and help lead a discussion after it is shown.

Promotional materials for "From Selma to Stonewall" describe it as following a "black, straight preacher and a white, lesbian activist" as they seek to find the intersection between the Civil Rights and LGBTQ equality movements, both in the past and present. The primary people featured in the documentary are Bennett and Reverend Gil Caldwell. On the surface, it doesn't seem like they would have much in common. Bennett is a 57-year-old white lesbian who is an author, activist, and national organizer. A retired United Methodist pastor, Caldwell is 85 years old, straight, and an African-American who served as a foot soldier and colleague of Dr. Martin Luther King during the Civil Rights Movement.

Bennett and Caldwell met while working to change the anti-LGBTQ policies of the United Methodist Church at the denomination's 2000 General Conference in Cleveland, Ohio. As their unique friendship grew, they forged a commitment to finding ways to build bridges across the divide of their different communities and experiences.

"From Selma to Stonewall: Are We There Yet?" follows Bennett and Caldwell as they explore the Civil Rights Movement through the eyes of Caldwell, including a return trip to Alabama where Caldwell participated in the historic march from Selma to Montgomery with Dr. King. The pair also visited New York City's Stonewall Inn to reconstruct the first night of the Stonewall Uprising, which is often considered the beginning of the LGBTQ Equality Movement.

Throughout the film, the role of religion varies for each of the two movements, and the documentary does not shy away from the differences. The film also examines how the two movements have often been pitted against each other, and how that results in the further marginalization of black members of the LGBTQ community who live at the intersection of the two movements. On a hopeful note, the documentary relays stories of people of color in the LGBTQ community who are seeking to change that dynamic and offering hope for the future.

Following the showing of From Selma to Stonewall, Bennett and local United Methodist Reverend Melissa Engel will lead a discussion and a question-and-answer session.

This event is sponsored by the Montana Human Rights Network, Butte Public Library, Rainbow + Community Center, and the Montana Interfaith Network.

Lifestyle Class Motivation

We are still so close to the first of the year when local gyms fill up and New Year's resolutions abound. There is a certain amount of motivation around a clean slate and a new year that makes us hopeful and willing to do our best. But we all know that motivation can be short lived. Let's look at what motivates us in the long run, especially to make changes that we can and will stick with.

At the first session of our Healthy Lifestyle Classes, we all share what has inspired us to come to a class that is about changing our lifestyles. Some of the typical reasons we hear are finding out about a diagnosis of pre-diabetes, or another health issue like high pressure, cholesterol or triglycerides. It can also be more personal, like healthy aging and being able to be there and still active for grandchildren and other family members.

It isn't that we don't know what things we could eat to improve our diet or that exercise assists with more energy and feeling better overall, it is having the motivation to do it. Fortunately, research has shown that motivation is the result of action, not the cause of it. Getting started, even in very small ways, is a form of active inspiration that naturally produces momentum.

That is where our classes come in. We provide the materials, the information and the support you need to act. At that point, you can take advantage of the fact that an object in motion tends to stay in motion. You will have a scheduled time to attend the class and the tools to continue making the small changes that can yield big results, especially in terms of how you feel about yourself.

Support and encouragement are one of the most popular aspects of the class. The camaraderie, and the sharing of successes and brainstorming challenges, add to the motivation you bring with you. While those of us that facilitate the class share information, we also learn from the wisdom shared by class participants. If you are currently inspired when you think about making some changes in your life, this is the class for you.

In addition to utilizing a dynamic, up-to-date curriculum that is in classes nationwide, our classes have the expertise of Ida Reighard, RN and Certified Diabetes Education, my presence as lifestyle coach and Personal Trainer, a certified Dietician from St. James, and Gina Pate-Terry, LSW, LAC, a counselor to help us deal with stress and understand why we eat.

Some factors that are also indicators for being able to benefit from Healthy Lifestyle classes: Being at risk for Type II Diabetes due to elevated blood pressure, cholesterol, fasting blood sugars; an elevated A1C (average blood sugar for last three months), and a BMI over 25. We will meet on Tuesdays at noon at the Community Health Center and on either Wednesday or Thursday evenings (depending on when interested participants can meet) at St. James.

For more information on the classes, or to see if you qualify, please call me at Community Health Center at 723-4075, Ext 415, or Ida at the Hospital at 723-2960. Classes will start around the middle of February and we will make you an appointment for an assessment to acquaint you with all aspects of our curriculum before the first class. For long-term better health, not a quick fix, don't delay, call today!

exercise, hydration, good sleep, meditation, happy thoughts, reduced stress, and good friends all contribute, I don't think I could survive with healing touch. This includes acupuncture, chiropractic adjustments and massage. Imagine my dismay, leaning towards despair, when I learned that my massage therapist of a few years is moving far, far away.

My wellbeing somehow survived when my last chiropractor left Butte, but it took a while to replace him. When you trust someone to touch your body, that trust is deep, personal and not easily substituted. We all need to be touched kindly, whether it's a hug or a massage. Do we start our day with a hug for our family as they come down for breakfast? Do we snuggle on the couch or rub each others' feet as we're watching TV?

How many of us now put a regular massage in our schedule? Have we recognized that the largest organ of our body, our skin, is a resource for wellness?

In 1971, author Ashley Montagu shared his interest in "the mind of the skin" with his book "Touching: The Human Significance of the Skin." He believed that the technological world had deprived humans of sensory experience, and as a result, we no longer reach out to each other in person.

Montagu wrote his book long before computers, cell phones, Tweets, or Instagram began to dictate how we interact with other humans daily. He believed that without the use of our senses, we become constricted, constrained, deprived and imprisoned in a world of impersonal words. While he

to come up with some possible solutions. A previous traffic study conducted last year recommended making the section of George St. from Oregon to Phillips Avenues one-way going east.

The committee voted to hold the matter in abeyance, pending more information.

acknowledged the huge impact on learning that technology offers, he also believed that it is our role as humans to join learning with "loving-kindness." How we learn to be kind humans has to do with activating our senses in a loving manner, chief among these being kind touch. "Where touching begins, there love and humanity also begin."

Given the fact that touching can be a taboo subject, not to mention inappropriate too often, many of us need to relearn the healing power of touch.

We must honor any degree of discomfort with being touched, making sure we feel safe in any situation where we are emotionally open and vulnerable. Once we understand touch as an act of healing, either in a personal relationship or with a trained body worker, such as massage therapist or energy healer, we can awaken our skin to the powerful effects of touch for our well-being.

German psychologist Franz Benedikter in his book "The Secrets of Loving Touch" theorizes that when certain skin zones are touched, extremely relaxing, mood-lifting hormones are released. Even simple, calming strokes can activate a state of hormonal harmony from within. This may explain why having a pet is so calming; the gentle act of petting our four legged companions is calming, and affects our hormonal activity. Benedikter believes that the use of healing touch can make artificial hormone replacement unnecessary in many medical cases. Ask any woman going through menopause if she doesn't believe that balanced hormonal activity leads to better health and more happiness.

All of us experience the effects of stress, and when our bodies are experiencing it from within, such as during an illness, catastrophic life event or natural aging, we may be unable to cope without healing assistance. Instead of reaching for over the counter or prescription medications that often have unwanted side effects, we could use healing touch as one avenue to well-being.

If you are not already getting a regular massage, ask your friends who do. Anyone who regularly uses touch as part of their wellness program will testify that they find themselves restored, honored, and more able to deal with the give and take of daily life.

Our skin is our most sensitive organ, the "mother of our senses," according to Montagu, the foundation upon which all our other senses are based. A baby may stop crying when held and calmed, but as adults, we lose our awareness of the need for touch, even when we're sore, irritable or sick. Receiving healing touch can activate our immune systems and provide relief from the stress we hold in our bodies.

We are fortunate to have many great massage therapists in Butte, so although my beloved massage therapist is leaving, we can all still get in touch and stay in touch, and allow its soothing effects to revitalize our health.

cies, deserves thanks for their work to bring FCR to the Mall.

"When they were asked about locations, they pointed to the Mall and the Mall's ownership made it happen," she said.

Ferko said some of the advantages the Mall offers for the call center are ample parking and plenty of nearby restaurants.

FCR, founded in 2005, is headquartered in Eugene, OR. The company provides a wide range of outsourced call center and business process solutions to industries that include high tech, startups, mobile commerce, wireless, telecom, finance, insurance, e-commerce, healthcare, retail, travel and hospitality. The company currently supports more than 70 clients and employs more than 1,800 people at its U.S. contact centers.

"This is not an experiment," Ferko said. "This is a company with a proven track record of locating in communities like Butte. It's a good fit—we have the same mentality. They came knocking on Butte's door."

What's Cooking

By Debbie Sorensen

With baseball and football games going on, I'm thinking about how to spice up the enjoyment of those experiences. A recipe this week comes from "Home-maker Schools Recipe Collection 1997." Enjoy this while gnashing your teeth over what is happening to your favorite team.

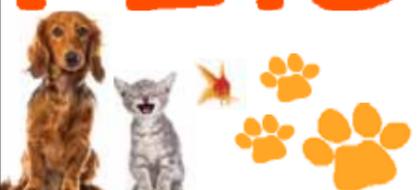

Spicy Bean Salsa

- 1 can black-eyed peas, drained
- 1 can corn, drained
- 1/2 c. chopped green pepper
- 1 can diced tomatoes, undrained
- 1 bottle (8 oz.) Italian salad dressing

- 1 can black beans, drained
- 1/2 c. chopped onion
- 1/2 c. finely chopped Jalapeño peppers
- 1/2 tsp. garlic salt
- Tortilla chips

In large glass bowl, combine all ingredients except tortilla chips; mix well. Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight to blend flavors. Serve with tortilla chips as an appetizer. May also serve as a side dish. Yield: 12 servings.

This Week In Labor History

"You are the ones who can say the word 'Solidarity' and call each other 'Brother and Sister'. The oppressor can claim nothing but his greed."

-Mother Jones, Legendary Labor Leader, school teacher, Knights of Labor and United Mine Workers organizer, IWW co-founder

Wednesday, Jan 16:

Thousands of Palmer Raids detainees win the right to meet with lawyers and attorney representation at deportation hearings. "Palmer" was the anti-Union U.S. attorney general under Woodrow Wilson. Palmer falsely accused Unions of being "Communists" and used the public's fear of Communism to crush the American Labor movement on behalf of the corporations. The offices of the IWW were raided and thousands of Wobblies (IWW members) were held without trial hundred were forcefully deported. -1920

Former UAW President Leonard Woodcock dies in Ann Arbor, Mich., at age 89. He had succeeded Walter Reuther and led the union from 1970 to 1977. -2001

Thursday, Jan 17:

"Radical" labor organizer Lucy Parsons leads hunger march in Chicago on this day. (Her late husband, who was heavily involved in campaigning for the 8-hour day, had been arrested, tried and executed on November 11, 1887, by the state of Illinois.) In 1905 she participated in the founding of the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW). Her feminism, which analyzed women's oppression as a function of Capitalism, was founded on working class values. Later Lucy focused on the class struggles around poverty and unemployment, and she organized the Chicago Hunger Demonstrations. -1915

Right-Wing Segregationists assault Rev Martin Luther King, Jr., in Selma, Alabama, as he registers as the first black guest in a hotel built a century earlier with slave labor. -1965

Friday, Jan 18:

U.S. Supreme Court (in order to protect company profits, low wages and deadly working conditions) rules in Moyer v. Peabody that a governor and officers of a state National Guard may imprison anyone (in the case at hand, striking miners in Colorado) without probable cause "in a time of insurrection" and deny the person the right of appeal. -1909
New York Times reports Wal-Mart Stores and Sams Clubs lock in their night shift workers with no key leaving them no chance of escape in case of emergencies. -2004

Saturday, Jan 19:

Twenty strikers at the American Agricultural Chemical Co. in Roosevelt, N.J., were shot, two fatally, by factory guards in order to protect corporate profits, low wages and deadly working conditions. The strikers had stopped an incoming train in search of scabs when the guards opened fire. -1915

3,000 members of the Filipino Federation of Labor strike the plantations of Oahu, Hawaii. Their ranks swell to 8,300 as they are joined by members of the Japanese Federation of Labor. -1920

Sunday, Jan 20:

At the height of the Red Scare 4000 foreign-born Labor organizers and Union members are falsely accused of Communism and arrested for "radical" activities, over 500 of whom are later deported from the land of the free. -1920

Hitler enacts the "Act on the Regulation of National Labor," replacing all Union collective bargaining agreements. The act read, in part, "The leader of the plant makes the decisions for the employees and laborers in all matters concerning the enterprise... He is responsible for the well-being of the employees and laborers. They owe him faithfulness." Fascist governments are always anti-union and can be identified by their strong desire to destroy Democratic Unions. -1934

Monday, Jan 21:

Over 750,000 steel workers walk out in 30 states, largest strike in U.S. history to that time. American Capitalists used WWII as an excuse to exploit workers and keep wages low even as profits were higher than ever. -1946

600 police, sent to protect corporate profits and low wages, attack and beat unarmed picketing longshoremen in Charleston, S.C. -2000

Tuesday, Jan 22

Indian field hands at San Juan Capistrano mission refused to work, engaging in what was probably the first farm worker strike in California. -1826

The United Mine Workers of America is founded in Columbus, Ohio, with the merger of the Knights of Labor Trade Assembly No. 135 and the National Progressive Miners Union. -1890

The Great Outdoors

Plenty of outdoor opportunities after hunting seasons end

By Paul Vang

We're in the heart of winter, when days are still short, most days are cold, and hunting seasons are over.

Take heart! Spring is coming. Every day, sunset comes a couple minutes later. The ultimate proof is that I just got my first gardening catalog of the season.

Another sign of spring is that this is the period for applying for a Smith River Private Float Permit.

A float trip on the Smith River is one of the ultimate Montana outdoor experiences; a chance to truly get away from it all.

For the benefit of the few people not familiar with the Smith River, it's a tributary of the Missouri River, merging with the big river near Ulm, south of Great Falls. The heart of the Smith River, a 59-mile stretch from near White Sulphur Springs, to Eden Bridge, upstream from the confluence, is basically accessible only by floating the river, and to float the river you have to enter a lottery.

It's not exactly a wilderness trip, as much of the route is in ranching country, with some occasional trophy homes along the river, and even a small golf course midway through the trip.

The scenery is stunning, with high cliffs that tower over the river, including areas with ancient petro-glyphs. There's abundant wildlife along the river, including black bears, which means you need to protect your food supply when you set up camp for the night.

It's a camping trip, with river campsites along the route, which means you can't dawdle along, because you have to cover around 15 to 20 miles daily. But, not to worry, there's plenty of time for fishing and the fishing can be great.

The deadline for entering the lottery is midnight on February 14. Applications can be submitted on-line or by mail.

A small number of outfitters are licensed to provide guided trips on the river, as well. Going with an outfitter is a good way to simplify the logistics of the trip, as they'll take care of all the food and such complexities. All it takes is money.

For more information and details, go online to stateparks.mt.gov.

While we dream of spring and warm days, a better option might be to take advantage of winter recreation, and there are abundant opportunities for outings in our part of Montana, and this weekend's Snöflinga festival is a good start.

Lots of people love ice fishing, and believe nothing's better than to spend a day on a frozen lake angling for trout, or whatever the lake might provide. Popular ice fishing destinations in this area include Georgetown Lake, Canyon Ferry Lake, Lewis & Clark Canyon, Ruby Reservoir, and others.

Standing out on a frozen lake can be a cold and windy proposition, though a portable shelter and propane heater can take the misery out of the outing.

Surrounded as we are by snowy mountains, we have lots of options for skiing, both cross-country and downhill.

Within an hour or so, we have Discovery Basin ski area between Anaconda and Philipsburg, or Maverick ski area west of Dillon. There's Bridger just out of Bozeman, or for the big ski resort experience, there's Big Sky an hour south of Bozeman.

For cross-country skiing, it can be as simple as a local golf course, or following groomed trails at the Moulton x-c area north of Walker-ville, or the Mt. Haggin cross country area, probably the only such developed recreation area wholly within a Wildlife Management Area.

Of course, there are the die-hards who scorn cold weather and put on waders and head for open river water for fly-fishing. I don't count myself in that group, though in mild winters, and this is shaping up to be a classical El Niño winter, we can get mild days, even in January, when fly-fishing can be an enjoyable outing.

Even if the regular hunting seasons are over, there are hunting opportunities for non-game animals such as rabbits. Cottontail rabbits are relatively plentiful—and delicious. In short, don't get the cabin fever blues. Go out and have fun.

Paul Vang's book, "Sweeter than Candy, A Hunter's Journal" is available at Books & Books, Cavanaugh's County Celtic, The Bookstore in Dillon, or online at <http://writingoutdoors.com>.

Catholic cemeteries subject of Archives talk

The Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives will continue its Brown Bag Lunch series on Wednesday, January 23, with a presentation by Donna Driver about Butte's historic Catholic cemeteries, when she will share some of St. Patrick's and Holy Cross Cemeteries' history as well as some genealogy advice for anyone researching their own family members. Driver has been working at the Butte Catholic Cemeteries for the past 2 years. Her ministry of serving the Butte Community while locating and recording vital records for the deceased, and helping family members locate their loved ones, has taken her on a journey through Butte's rich heritage. It is filled with stories of joy, sadness, humor, mystery and respect for the deceased. The presentation will begin at noon and run about an hour at the Archives, 17 W. Quartz. Guests are encouraged to bring a sack lunch. Coffee and water will be provided. Brown Bag Lunches are held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Upcoming lectures will focus on topics of local interest. For more information, contact the Archives at 782-3280.

'No Citations:' Highlands Hospice Earns Top Results in State Regulatory Visit

The Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services completed an unannounced standard regulatory survey at Easterseals-Goodwill Highlands Hospice, on December 26-28, 2018. However, the nurses, aides, and other staff were well prepared, as proven by the results of this visit: a "no citations" letter from the state.

"No citations' is the ultimate goal of any hospice provider but not often achieved in a survey," stated Highlands Hospice Clinical Manager, Christy Zimpel. "They inquired into every aspect of our patient care and how we conduct business to ensure we are meeting state and federal regulatory requirements. The result of our efforts makes us very proud," continued Zimpel.

A standard regulatory visit such as the one Highlands Hospice had in late December is called a survey. Hospice providers typically undergo a survey every few years to ensure they are in compliance with Medicare regulations and serving patients and families appropriately. The last survey for Highlands Hospice occurred in 2016.

Hospice care includes nursing, home health aides, social worker assistance, spiritual care, volunteer services, and other contracted services for patients at end of life.

Highlands Hospice is an outpatient hospice, meaning all care is provided in a patient's residence, whether that is in a home, apartment, assisted living facility, or nursing home. A patient who has a terminal diagnosis from a doctor may be eligible for hospice, depending on their prognosis and choice of care.

Highlands Hospice wishes to thank their Butte community partners, businesses and families for their ongoing support and helping them reach this level of achievement.

Easterseals-Goodwill Northern Rocky Mountain Inc. is a non-profit organization with employment and job training, community integration and housing for adults with intellectual disabilities, children's therapy, and health-related programs for adults and seniors. Easterseals-Goodwill provides 43 different programs in 42 locations in Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Utah.

Highlands Hospice was founded locally in 1980 as an all-volunteer organization providing end-of-life-care for patients in Butte and surrounding areas. Today Highlands Hospice operates as a non-profit provider under the umbrella of Easterseals-Goodwill Northern Rocky Mountain Inc.
