$200,000 Hard Rock grant approved for new Ace Hardware Store

By Robin Jordan

Butte-Silver Bow commissioners last week approved a $200,000 grant from the Hard Rock Mining Trust Fund to help with construction of a new $5.9 million Ace Hardware store.

The owners of Butte's Ace Hardware plan to build a new 24,800 square foot store just west of Harrison Avenue behind Auto Zone and north of the Holiday Inn Express. In their grant application, owners Tom Shellenberg and Matt Dowdell said Ace has outgrown its current location at 1839 Harrison. Having a bigger store would allow Ace to offer a deeper selection of products in its paint, electrical, plumbing, power tools, pet and lawn and garden departments.

The owners say financing for the project should be finalized by the end of this December and they hope to open the new store in late 2018.

The Hard Rock grant money will be used toward the cost of earthwork needed for construction of the store. Engineers have recommended removing loose fill dirt, organic material and clay from the site before construction begins, a job that is estimated to cost $714,000.

The owners say they chose the site just off Harrison Avenue because 90 percent of Butte's retail is within one block of the street. They wanted good visibility and easy access for motorists travelling in either direction and they wanted to be north of the Interstate exchange because more homes are located there.

The application says Ace expects sales to increase 50 percent in the new store's second year of operation, creating 7 new full time jobs. Butte's Ace Hardware currently has 18 full-time employees, who receive health insurance and other benefits. The new store will pay approximately $40,000 a year to the county in property taxes.

Ace Hardware has been operating in Butte for the last 15 years and Shellenberg and Dowell have been the owners for the last 11 years.

Started as a hardware chain in 1924, Ace Hardware became a cooperative in 1973 and is now the largest hardware retail cooperative in the world, with 5,000 stores. Independent retailers own the corporation, which allows them to tailor their merchandising and services to their own community needs.

Before the council of commissioners voted on the grant application, Commissioner Jim Fisher said he wanted to address constituents who had complained about spending county money on the project.

"This is not taxpayer money," he said. "This fund is for projects that meet certain criteria. The money has been sitting there for 20 years. This is nearly a $6 million project that will employ people and create construction jobs. This is economic development at its best."

The Hard Rock Mining Trust comes from money paid in by hard rock mining operations to be used to offset economic loss when mining activities cease and guidelines for local government use of the funds are set by state law. It can be used to promote diversification and development of the local economy through assistance to existing and new businesses.

Prior to Ace Hardware's application, the county most recently provided funding from the Hard Rock Trust for renovation of the Copper King Hotel and for the new terminal at the Bert Mooney Airport.

Community Development Director Karen Byrnes told commissioners that $210,000 will remain in the trust fund after the grant to Ace Hardware.

It sounds crazy, but by far the worst call of the football season somehow did not involve the NFL and those lovely words "complete the process of the catch."

It worst call wasn't even in Lambeau Field, which has a 64-year streak of hosting the worst call of the season.

This year's leader in the clubhouse of dubious calls came in the Montana Tech-Rocky Mountain College game on the Bob Green Field.

A Montana Tech defensive player was flagged for "taunting" after the Orediggers stopped the Battlin' Bears for a 1-yard loss on third and 3 from the Tech 37-yard line.

Nobody could see why the flag was thrown. The Orediggers didn't do an elaborate celebration. It wasn't like they reenacted a scene from the movie BASEketball.

It had to be something the Oredigger player said, and, God forbid, we add hurt feelings to a sport full of torn ACLs, broken collarbones and con-

BUTTE SPORTS

College football needs to lighten up on taunting

cussions.

The thing that bothers me about the call isn't that it gave the Bears a first down that directly led to a game-tying touchdown late in the third quarter.

The thing that bothers me isn't even that a Rocky receiver was not flagged for taunting earlier in the game when he made a great catch and then demonstratively stood over the Oredigger defender.

What is offensive about the call was that it was called at all.

Nobody is disputing that the Tech player said or did something that constituted a flag under the rule book. I'm sure the officials went by the letter of the law, even though they did not earlier.

The problem is the rules makers have the officials worrying about things they shouldn't be concerned with at all.

Don't the officials already have enough to be watching for with holding, clipping and pass interference?

Do we really want the white hairs in the white caps distinguishing between what is acceptable trash talk and what is taunting between 18 to 23-year-old guys? Most of the officials haven't even seen BASEketball — or a more timely and relevant movie that I could have referenced had I not been as out of touch with pop culture as the old guy in the white cap.

We really should reconsider why we are so hard on football players for having fun in the first place.

It seems like smack talk is accepted — even encouraged — in other sports, but we try to force the young men playing the barbaric sport of college football to act like they are at church after every play.

Look at the World Series. Not only was it the best World Series since 2013, it set the record for taunting after hits. Not just home runs, either. They were taunting after singles. Leadoff singles.

Even when his late-game home run was too little, too late, Joc Pederson of the Dodgers ran around the bases like he was Bobby Thompson after the Shot Heard 'Round the World.

You have to wonder what Bob Gibson was thinking. He probably threw his remote at the TV, hoping to hit him in the ribs. Same with Don Drysdale. And Pedro Martinez.

Gibson, Drysdale and Martinez, though, come from a different time, and times, boy, they have a changed. All you have to do is look at the way the players wear their hats to see that.

While there are some old-school holdovers who will still throw a punch at a player for a taunting bat flip — and God bless you Rought Odor — but they are few and far between.

For the most part, players want to showboat every seemingly significant accomplishment like Peter Griffin when he scored a touchdown for the Patriots.

Earlier this season, the Minnesota Vikings celebrated a touchdown by playing Duck, Duck, Goose, the game popular with kindergarten children around the world.

Yes, the Minnesota Viking. The Purple People Eaters. They played Duck, Duck, Goose, and you can only hope that Bud Grant wasn't watching that night.

Yet, a Montana Tech player can't give a little "in your face" banter after a big tackle? You've got to be kidding.

Football is the one sport where players should be allowed to show some emotion after a big play. Whenever they do, though, the Fun Nazis are there to say "tisk, tisk."

Years ago, Montana Western used an incredible hook-and-ladder play for a touchdown of about 90 yards to tie Montana Tech in the final seconds of the game.

It was one of the best players you could ever see, and, naturally, the Western players left the sideline to celebrate the touchdown. That drew a flag, and the Bulldogs were penalized for excessive celebration, as if there could really be such a thing for such a play.

The Bulldogs should only have been penalized for celebrating if they rushed the field.

In football, after all, every play could literally be your last, so you have to play with a certain edge about you. So, you'd think that would at least allow the players in football the leeway of, say, a volleyball player.

Seriously, have you ever been to a high school or college volleyball match?

The taunting that is allowed in that sport would bring an old — or even a middle aged — football official to tears.

One team celebrates every point in a volleyball match. That's right, if a set finishes at 25-23, the match sees 48 celebrations that would draw a 15-yard penalty in a college football game.

A team could be trailing 24-3 and facing match point. Then, if the team scores a point to cut the lead to 20, the players will celebrate like they just hit a walk-off home run.

Bob Gibson would throw his remote at the TV if he saw it.

There really is nothing wrong with the way volleyball players act during matches. Actually, it's one of my favorite things about watching the sport.

There is no way, however, that you can call such reactions anything but taunting of the opponent.

But you know what? The other team never seems to mind.

It's just like the Astros were upset that Pederson hit a home run, not that he acted like Peter Griffin as he rounded bases.

The Orediggers were not offended when the receiver taunted the defensive back, and you better believe the Rocky player subjected to the alleged taunting words from the Orediggers would have bounced back before the punt team was on the field.

Even the No Fun League has come around by letting the professional football players have some fun. It's time for college football to come around, too.

Let's let football players know the joy of what it is like in to score a point in volleyball or to hit a leadoff single in the World Series.

Even if the celebration includes a game of Duck, Duck, Goose.

Angling legend Lefty Kreh retires at age 92

By Paul Vang

For several years we took in the Federation of Fly-Fishers annual convention and trade show when it was held in Livingston, Montana. You never knew what you might see, such as the petite lady of fly-fishing, Joan Wulff, demonstrating casting, making a quick and casual-looking cast with a fly-rod, sending the line out twice as far as I've ever done.

Another memorable sight was Lefty Kreh, one of the most revered people in fly-fishing, walking across the trade show floor with about a dozen rods in his arms, getting ready to do a fly-casting class.

Lefty (his given name is Bernard Victor Kreh) was born in Maryland and grew up fishing, hunting and trapping to help support his family. He got his nickname because he was ambidextrous and used both hands equally when playing basketball.

After finishing high school he enlisted in the U.S. Army and served in Europe in the last year of WWII, seeing action at the Battle of the Bulge, and had five battle stars by the end of the war.

In 1947, Lefty was guiding bass fishermen on the upper Potomac River and one day guided fly-fishing's biggest celebrity of the time, Joe Brooks. Using fly equipment, Brooks out-fished Lefty, who was still using plug-casting gear. Lefty got hooked on fly-fishing and became one of the masters of the sport, especially at the techniques of casting.

Over the years, he's done about everything to do with fishing, even participating in a fishing tournament in Cuba, spending a day fishing with Ernest Hemingway and then Fidel Castro (before the U.S. government cut ties with Cuba).

He's been a prolific writer for newspapers and magazines and wrote over 30 books. He's won just about every honor possible from various organizations such as Trout Unlimited, Federation of Fly Fishers, and International Game Fish Association.

In spite of reaching his 90s, Lefty has maintained an exhausting schedule of fishing, teaching, writing, and creating film and videos. He's truly been the "Energizer Bunny" of fly-fishing. Unfortunately, even those fabled batteries will eventually lose their energy, and so has Lefty Kreh.

Lefty sent a message to the Gulf Coast Council of Fly Fishers International, with a request they share it through the fly-fishing community. He writes, "I was 92 in January and had a carotid artery operation. During testing the hospital determined my heart was only pumping 35% and must limit my physical activities. The industry was extremely helpful and last season was able to attend the shows, clinics, etc.

"Several weeks ago I realized I was developing another problem, which is normal for someone nearly 93. It turns out I have congested [congestive] heart failure...In summary I have to give up travel and presentations as in the past."

Lefty writes about his struggle with congestive heart failure, with weight gain, fluid retention and adjusting medications. He continues, "This means the schedule I lived for decades is no longer valid and will spend most of my time at home. As that. If Mark's (Dr. Mark Lamos) medical system works I should be busy and around for a year or two. Lefty explains he wants others to spread the word about his health, explaining he doesn't have energy to answer emails or talk on the phone. "This is not meant to be unfriendly is learning to adjuster my situation." (sic) He concludes, "In summary I'm busy and content but I want you to know I am so appreciative you've shared your lives with me." Lefty Kreh, a true representative of that "Greatest Generation," has had an amazing career and is facing the inevitable with grace and humility. I hope he's able to find the energy to occasionally go fishing.

we get older we learn to adjust to what we can and cannot do. I have a number of interesting computer home projects on the computer and busier than a Syrian bricklayer. I'm not frustrated and I'm content. My problem is I don't have a lot of stamina and have to work around

What's in a name?

By Robin Jordan

Last week, despite some public grumbling, commissioners approved the name "Ridge Waters" for the new waterpark at Stodden Park.

Parks and Recreation Director J.P. Gallagher explained that naming the park was a long process. Local citizens, including school children, were asked to submit their suggestions for names and the county received over 200 submissions. The Parks and Recreation board winnowed these down to three possibilities, "Ridge Waters," "Treasure Cove" and "406 Waterpark."

The board decided against "406 Waterpark" because a number of other enterprises were using the "406"—the area code for Butte—and members feared the "406" trend might become obsolete in a few years. Many opposed the name "Treasure Cove," meant to play on Montana's "Treasure State" moniker, because they said it sounded like a casino.

So, commissioners were left with the name "Ridge Waters," a nod Butte's East Ridge.

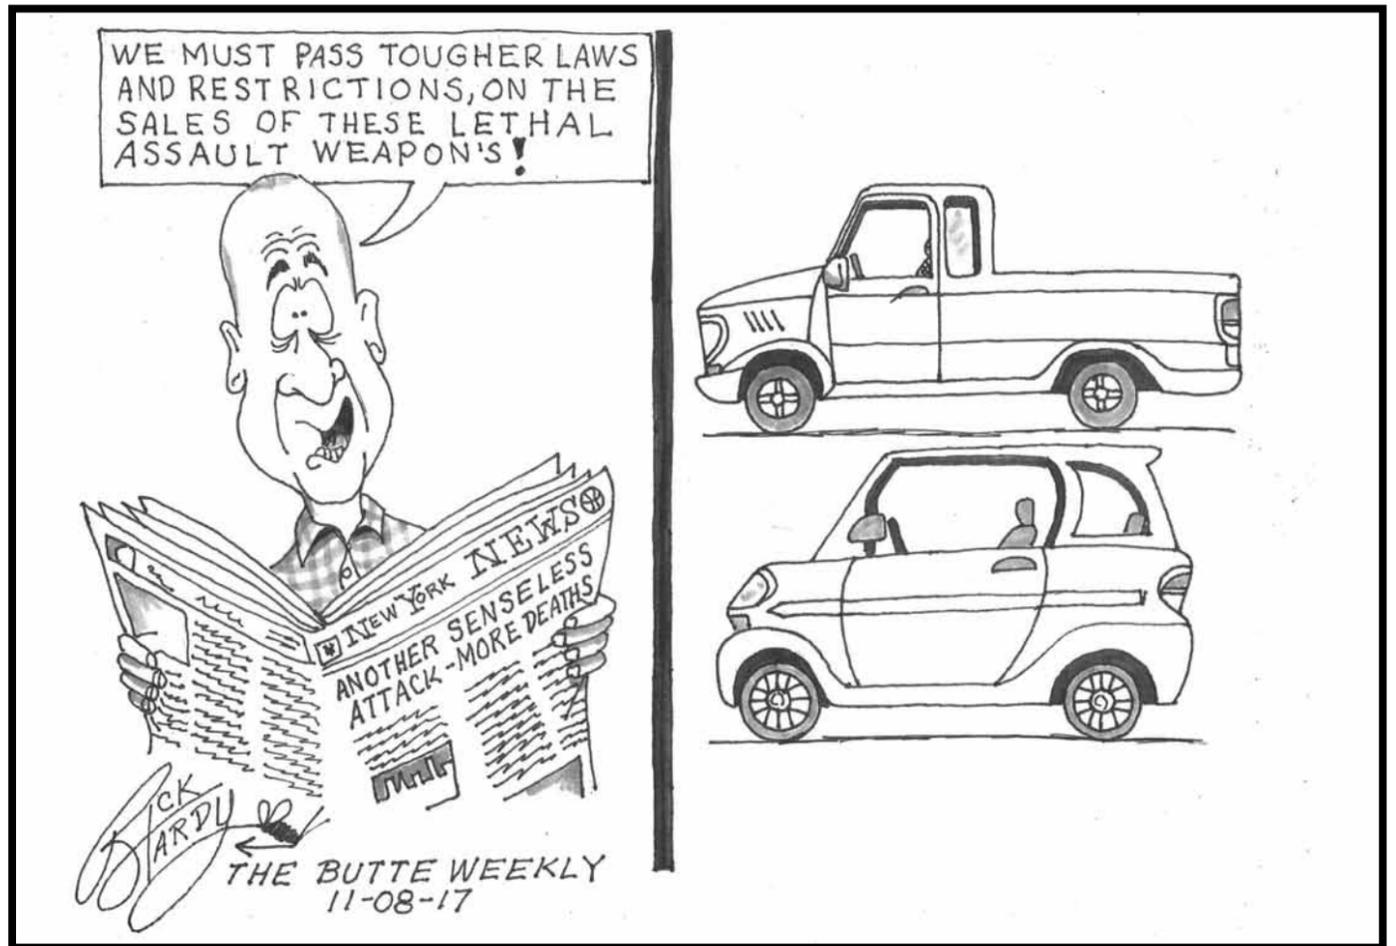

In its discussions, the Parks and Recreation board decided against names with mining connotations because of the "dirty water" stigma connected to water pollution from past mining damage and Butte's Superfund status. Under new county naming guides, the park could not be named for any person or group of people.

The board also decided not to use "Columbia" or "Columbia Gardens" in the name because "Spirit of Columbia Gardens" is already attached to the carousel. It might also bring back memories of the failed "Columbia Gardens II" project of the 1980s.

So, the board had a pretty narrow set of guidelines to walk in choosing a name for the waterpark. We know many are unhappy with the choice of "Ridge Waters," but, as Gallagher pointed out, all of the potential names were chosen by the public. If you had a better name, we guess, you could have submitted it.

Some commissioners wanted more time to go through all the submissions, but Gallagher pointed out that a name needed to be chosen right away so that a logo can be designed and signage ordered. That's a legitimate concern if the park is to be ready to open next spring.

We personally thought a lot of controversy could have been avoided by applying the same logic that was used in naming Butte's new parking garage to naming the pool. The parking garage will simply be named "Park." We thought the waterpark could just be named "Swim."

We know. Everyone would hate that worse than "Ridge Waters."

We're disappointed that the name doesn't really evoke much association with Butte or Butte history. We do understand why the board avoided any association with mining because of the association with "dirty water." As Gallagher pointed out to commissioners, Butte's mining heritage will be reflected in the new playgrounds that will be built in Stodden Park, so the Parks and Recreation board is not trying to totally reject our history.

Now that the name is chosen and it looks like we're looking forward to a long winter, we'll just focus on looking forward to spring and the opening of the new waterpark and improved features at Stodden Park. Here's to a long, hot summer in 2018!

The Legacy of Chalmers Johnson

By George Waring

We're approaching the twentieth anniversary of the publication of Chalmers Johnson's "Blowback." The title is CIA shorthand for the unintended consequences of covert operations. Johnson's book contains the reflections of a scholar whose pioneering social and economic studies of postwar Japan and China gave him the ability to understand the political and economic forces in the 1990's that were driving the United States into an imperial decline.

Johnson lived long enough to add two equally challenging reflections on his thesis, completing his "Sorrows of Empire" trilogy a year before his death in 2007. Today, Chris Hedges and William Greider are building on Johnson's legacy, trying to stir young people to wrest power from our oligarchy before the republic dies. I plan, God willing, to write about them in the near future. For now, I'll share lessons Johnson imparted two decades ago.

My copy of "Blowback" is dated November 2001, almost two years after its first edition. By then, it had been reprinted eight times! Osama Bin Laden's successful attack of 9/11 had made "Blowback" a must read. In his November 2001 preface, Johnson noted the lack of interest when his book appeared the year previous. When reviewed by the Council on Foreign Relations, the New York finance industry's foreign policy directorate, its reviewer dismissed "Blowback" as a "comic book." Not quite so "comic" a year later.

Johnson had written about Osama bin Laden and his Arab mujahideen followers back in 1999, using their bombings of US embassies in Dar as Salaam and Nairobi in 1998 as examples of "blowback." In his chapter on the Middle Eastern policies of Carter, Reagan, and Bush I, he guaranteed that the American public would learn more in the future about CIA and Pentagon policies that had been kept secret. Johnson correctly predicted the tragic nature of our learning experiences.

Today, the US military commitment in Afghanistan is expanding. Obama's scheduled withdrawals have ended. During September, 4,000 troops arrived, joining 11,000 veterans. Thus did Trump reverse his campaign promise of withdrawal. This 16-year war began as "Operation Enduring Freedom." It is now "Resolute Support." By mid-July, 2,403 American soldiers had died, along with thousands of Taliban and Al Qaeda fighters. Estimates for Afghan civilian casualties since 2001 range from 31,000 to 170,000.

According to Johnson, US involvement in Afghanistan began in July, 1979, when the CIA began to funnel aid through Pakistan to Islamic mujahideen guerrillas who were fighting to overthrow the Soviet supported secular government in Kabul. In a 1998 interview, Carter's National Security Adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said that the purpose of supplying and training these rebels was to induce the Soviets to invade Afghanistan in order to save their ally. This secret operation succeeded as planned; within six months, the Soviets crossed the border. Brzezinski wrote to Carter, "We now have the opportunity of giving the USSR its Vietnam War."

When asked whether he had any "regrets about supporting Islamic fundamentalism, which has given arms and advice to future terrorists," Brzezinski replied: "What is more important in world history? The Taliban taking power in Afghanistan or the collapse of the Soviet empire? Some agitated Moslems or the liberation of Central Europe and the end of the Cold War?"

Reagan continued Carter's policy, with greatly increased funding, giving the mujahideen the firepower needed to destroy Soviet helicopters. After nine years, the Soviet force of over 100,000 troops withdrew. Estimates of Afghan civilian casualties range from 560,000 to 2,000,000. More than 2 million Afghans fled the country as refugees during the 1980's, most going to Pakistan and Iran. As Brzezinski stated, the Afghan civil war of the 1980s is considered a huge American foreign policy victory within the Cold War.

Chalmers Johnson flatly states that the Carter and Reagan administrations "bear some responsibility" for the millions of Afghans listed above, and also for "the 10 million land mines left in Afghanistan." But, Johnson emphasizes, also for the "collateral damage" that befell New York City in September 2001.

Johnson writes that "from at

What's Cooking

Quick Evening Meal
By Debbie Sorensen

I was very interested when I found this meal suggestion in a "Taste of Home Simple & Delicious" magazine from 2009. Finding another way to season "the other white meat," was a delight and a nice change from the usual I've done for a long time. Adding the seasoned pasta and beans was another delicious surprise. The meal is quickly prepared and very appealing.

Basil Pork Chops

- ¼ c. packed brown sugar
- ½ tsp. salt
- 2 T. vegetable oil, divided
- 4 boneless pork loin chops (½ inch thick and 4 ounces each)
- 1 ½ tsp. dried basil
- ½ tsp. chili powder

In small bowl, combine the brown sugar, basil, salt and chili powder. Gradually stir in 1 T. oil until crumbly. Rub over both sides of pork chops. In a large skillet, cook pork in remaining oil over medium heat for 7-8 minutes on each side or until juices run clear. Yield: 4 servings.

Salsa Pasta 'n' Beans

- 8 ounces uncooked bow tie pasta
- 1 medium sweet yellow pepper, chopped
- 1 can (16 oz.) red beans, rinsed and drained
- ¾ c. vegetable broth
- 2 tsp. ground cumin
- ½ c. chopped onion
- 1 T. olive oil
- 2 tsp. minced garlic
- ¾ c. salsa
- 1/3 c. minced fresh cilantro

Cook pasta according to package directions. Meanwhile, in a large skillet, sauté onion and yellow pepper in oil for 3-4 minutes or until crisp-tender. Add garlic; cook 1-2 minutes longer or until tender.

Stir in the beans, broth, salsa and cumin. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer, uncovered, for 5-6 minutes or until heated through. Drain pasta, stir into bean mixture. Sprinkle with cilantro. Yield: 4 servings.

Stampeding Bull Market May Slow Down ... So Be Prepared

As you know, we've been enjoying a long period of steadily rising stock prices. Of course, this bull market won't last forever – and when it does start losing steam, you, as an investor, need to be prepared.

Before we look at how you can ready yourself for a new phase in the investment environment, let's consider some facts about the current situation:

Length – This bull market, which began in 2009, is the second-oldest in the past 100 years – and it's about twice as long as the average bull market.

Strength – Since the start of this long rally, the stock market has produced an average annualized gain of 15.5% per year. While these figures are impressive, they aren't necessarily predictive – so how much longer can this bull market continue to "stampede"? No one can say for sure, but there's no mandatory expiration date for bull markets – in fact, they don't generally die of old age, but typically expire either because of a recession or the bursting of a bubble, such as the "dot.com" bubble of 2000 or the housing bubble of 2007. And right now, most market experts don't see either event on the near-term horizon.

Still, this doesn't mean you should necessarily expect an uninterrupted streak of big gains. Some signs point to greater market volatility and lower returns. To navigate this changing landscape, think about these suggestions:

Consider rebalancing your portfolio. If appropriate, you may want to rebalance your investment mix to ensure you have a reasonable percentage of stocks – to help provide the growth you need to achieve your goals – and enough fixed-income vehicles, such as bonds, to help reduce your portfolio's vulnerability to market volatility and potential short-term downturns.

Look beyond U.S. borders. At any given time, U.S. stocks may be doing well, while international stocks are slumping – and vice versa. So, when volatility hits the U.S. markets – as it surely will, at some time – you can help reduce the impact on your portfolio if you also own some international equities. Keep in mind, though, that international investments bring some specific risks, such as currency fluctuations and foreign political and economic events. Develop a strategy. You may want to work with a financial professional to identify a strategy to cope with a more turbulent investment atmosphere. Such a strategy can keep you from overreacting to market downturns and possibly even help you capitalize on short-term pullbacks. You could invest systematically by putting the same amount of money in the same investments each month. When prices go up, your investment dollars will buy fewer shares, and when prices drop, you'll buy more shares. And the more shares you own, the greater your potential for accumulation. However, this strategy, sometimes known as dollar cost averaging, won't guarantee a profit or protect against all losses, and you need to be willing to keep investing when share prices are declining.

During a raging bull market, it's not all that hard for anyone to invest successfully. But it becomes more challenging when the inevitable volatility and market downturns appear. Making the moves described above can help you keep moving toward your goals – even when the "bull" has taken a breather.

Ease Holiday Stress

The holidays, I think, how can they already be upon us? Not being one of the organized folks who start shopping and organizing for the upcoming year as soon as the after-Christmas sales start, there is always panic at some point when I realize I should have started everything earlier. A timeline is a good place to start but there are lots of other things we can do to get through the season and have time and energy left over to enjoy ourselves.

Even before thinking about a timeline, take a few minutes to prioritize. If we figure out the traditions and foods that are really important to us, we may be able to eliminate some time-consuming jobs that will leave us more able to enjoy the season. Once you have your list set, stick to it and say no to anything you didn't include. Do a budget as well and stick to it. Don't second guess yourself at the last minute and go out and impulsively buy extra gifts, food and decorations.

As not all of us are lucky enough to have families to get together with, think of someone you know who may be spending Thanksgiving or Christmas alone and invite them to your home. If you are one of those people without family or close friends, reach out and let others know you will be by yourself. You may be surprised at how others are happy to include you in their festivities.

We have all become aware of the fact that part of the stress of the holiday season comes to those who don't have the resources to do everything they would like, or who have memories or issues that make the whole season difficult for them. Reach out to people you know in this situation, or give their names to programs that can help them and make their holidays brighter.

If your family is looking for a less material way of celebrating, consider adopting a person or family, using the money you would have spent on presents for each other to help those less fortunate. Or take a name off a gift tree and buy something for a child. This is especially rewarding for those without children or grandchildren of their own.

In your circle of friends and family, you may have had a disagreement with someone and don't look forward to seeing them. You could set aside your differences in the spirit of the holiday season. Do your best not to bring up unpleasant things at holiday gatherings or involve other guests in your issues.

Last, but most importantly, taking care of yourself is paramount when it comes to getting the most from the holidays. Make sure to get enough sleep, stay on a healthy eating plan, and get regular exercise no matter how much it feels like there are not enough hours in the day. Taking time for relaxation and recovery is more essential now than ever. You will have so much to give and the ability to enjoy everyone and everything if you are rested and relaxed.

Before Thanksgiving is the perfect time to make your lists and set your priorities. Make this your best holiday season ever by being prepared, spending time on the things that are important to you, while staying on track to be the healthiest and happiest person you can be. You and everyone around you will feel the positive energy and be able to share the holiday spirit!

Carousel Corner

Larry Hoffman

Another good week of progress at our Carousel.

All of the walls and ceiling are taped and textured, with a great deal covered with a primer coat of paint. Painting volunteers are welcome during the week, as long as Mike Sawicki or Mason Masters are there to provide guidance. Like all of us, they have other obligations and can't be there every day, so we have to ask for your patience and understanding if you're in your painting clothes and mood and no one is there.

Our Exchange Club crew, their highway-cleanup season ended by the weather, was there last Thursday and just happened to arrive when Mike was gone for supplies. I hope we can coordinate things a little better, but it's not like a regular construction site with a person for every job and fixed hours.

Sharon Verbeck Arends and the Tom Ortega family were there last week and got a lot of area covered.

We are ready to paint interior doors and trim, as well as continuing with the walls. Fortunately, Tom Gordon is doing most of the ceilings. We only have two scissor lifts for the high work and sometimes there is a conflict of priorities. Bob Foley and Tom Davies are usually wiring from noon until three or four Mondays and Fridays, generally tying up one lift during those times.

Insulation and the rain gutters were delayed by the weather, among other things, but the material is ready to go.

The weather also stopped our search for the leak in the central carousel room, but warmer weather will eventually reveal the problem.

Work sessions Mondays and Tuesdays at 3:00, Saturdays at 10:00 (not 9:00 this time of year), or call me at 491-4660 if you are available other times. The Tuesday session was

This Week In Labor History November 8th - November 14th

"If it weren't for Unions, if it weren't for what happened in Chicago back in 1886, you'd be working 16 hours a day. Four guys got hanged for you twerps. Did you know that? So you can work 8 hours a day? Men were hanged for that!"
-Studs Terkel, American historian, Pulitzer Prize recipient

Wednesday, Nov 8:

20,000 workers, black and white, stage general strike in New Orleans, demanding Union recognition and hour and wage gains. The bosses used race-baiting to try and divide the workers, but failed. Other Unions started to join in Solidarity. The strike bled the banks of half their pre-strike holdings. Finally the bosses agreed to sit down with both black and white Union leaders and agreed to the 10-hour day and overtime pay. -1892

Dorothy Day, IWW member, Catholic Worker founder, American journalist, social justice activist, pacifist, is born. She establish the Catholic Worker Movement, a pacifist movement that combined direct aid for the poor and homeless with nonviolent direct action on their behalf. A proud Wobbler she said, "My Americanism inclined me to the I.W.W. Movement." -1897

Thursday, Nov 9:

200 assembly-line workers at Nash automobile in Kenosha, Wisconsin, walked out in protest of the new piece rates. Owner Charles Nash subsequently locked out all 3,000 workers. Workers at both the Racine and Milwaukee's Seaman Body plants eventually joined the strike and all win raises of up to 17 percent and Union recognition at each plant. -1933

Committee for Industrial Organization founded under John L. Lewis by

8 Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. They wanted more focus on organizing mass production industry workers. -1935

Friday, Nov 10:

Haymarket Martyr Louis Lingg, 22, "cheated" the state the day before his scheduled execution by committing suicide in his prison cell by exploding a dynamite cap in his mouth. 4 others were hung the next day. The 8 Haymarket Martyrs were 8-hour day activists "Radicals" who were framed for murder for their labor activism by the Capitalist interest. The remaining 3 would later be pardoned by the Governor who criticized the trial. -1887

Sit-down strike begins at Austin, Minn., Hormel plant with the help of a IWW organizer, leading to the creation of the IUAW. This was the first sit-down strike of the 1930's. 400 men chased out nonunion workers. One group rushed a conference room where Jay Hormel and company executives were and declared: "We're taking possession. So move out!" Within 4 days the company agreed to binding arbitration with the Union. -1933

Saturday, Nov 11:

Haymarket Martyrs hanged today. 8-hour day labor activists, Albert Parsons, August Spies, George Engel, and Adolph Fischer, were framed for the Haymarket bombing 1886 during a Labor demonstration in Chicago, and executed by hanging. Spies' last words - "The day will come when our silence will be more powerful than the voices you are throttling today" - are engraved on the Haymarket Martyrs' Monument in Chicago. -1887

Armed "patriots" from the American Legion attacked and destroyed the IWW labor hall in Centralia, Washington, murdering 6. They then kidnapped, tortured, castrated and lynched Wesley Everest, a decorated WWI Veteran and IWW organizer. Local officials listed his death as a suicide. -1919

Sunday, Nov 12:

On this day in 1924 Ellis Island closed as immigration entry point. The island served as a detention and deportation center until 1954. Germans soldiers were imprisoned there as well as Union members who had been falsely accused of Communism during the shameful McCarthy era. Today Ellis Island houses an immigration museum. -1924

"Chainsaw Al" Dunlap announces he is restructuring the Sunbeam Corp. and lays off 6,000 workers, half the workforce. Sunbeam nearly collapsed due to Friedman downsizing policies used under Dunlap's leadership that cost investors billions of dollars. -1996

Monday, Nov 13:

Butte Montana: A Western Federation of Miners strike is crushed by massive government intervention and the militia who sided with the Capital interest over the workers. The miners were striking for better pay and safer working conditions. The WFM was a "radical" organization co-founded by Butte Union miners; it played a key role in the founding of the IWW. -1914

Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union activist Karen Silkwood is killed in a suspicious car crash on her way to deliver documents to a newspaper reporter during a safety investigation of her Kerr-McGee plutonium processing plant in Oklahoma. All her documentation of safety violations disappear. -1974

Tuesday, Nov 14:

Trade Unions form the Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Organizations, later becoming the AFL. Under the leadership of Samuel Gompers and Peter McGuire, the AFL became the most influential labor organization in the nation. -1881

Sen. Joe McCarthy (R-WI), right-wing lunatic, alcoholic and shame of the nation, born. McCarthyism destroyed the lives of thousands of good Americans and Union members by falsely accusing them of Communism. McCarthy stomped on civil liberties and the exercise of freedoms with impunity for his political gain until he was censured by the Senate. (McCarthyism and Red-Baiting were in fact used by Republican Sen. Steve Daines (MT), during his 2014 campaign, to smear his opponent) -1909

Restore Our Creek holds Rally Nov. 14

The Restore Our Creek Coalition will hold a rally, November 14 at 6:30 pm, of Butte citizens to require the EPA, State of Montana, Butte-Silver Bow, and BP/ARCO to clean and restore our Silver Bow Creek corridor.

"Too much time has passed without movement on the removal of the Parrott Tailings", said Northey Tretheway, spokesperson for Restore Our Creek Coalition. The goal of the rally is to let the decision-makers know that we want Silver Bow Creek cleaned up and restored in a fashion that equals that received west of Butte. It's time to remove the tailings - restore the creek - get it done.

Since announcing, nearly two years ago, the State of Montana has been working on a plan to remove the contaminated waste adjacent to the Civic Center, that includes waste under the county shops. Numerous public meetings were held by Butte-Silver Bow county officials on potential sites for relocation of the shops; settling on a site off the Beef Trail Road in the spring of 2016. Since the announcement the public has not heard the progress of the move nor the final design plans for removal of the Parrott Tailings.

Restore Our Creek has been working for more than two years for the full restoration of the Silver Bow Creek Corridor's natural landscape, beginning with the removal of mining wastes at three sites along the creek: Parrot Tailings, Northside Tailings, and Diggings East.

The successful remediation and restoration of the Silver Bow Creek Corridor will provide a vital resource to the surrounding neighborhood and urban environment, and will help link historically divided areas of Butte, Uptown and the Flats by creating a vibrant and healthy landscape open to all.

Community leaders and Coalition members will speak on behalf of Restore Our Creek Coalition for the removal of tailings and restoration of Silver Bow Creek corridor. Help clean up our Creek! Join the rally at the Covellite Theater, 215 West Broadway across from the library, at 6:30pm. For more information, contact Northey Tretheway at 285-8667 or David McCumber at 496-5513 or email restoreourcreek@gmail.com or visit our website at www.restoreourcreek.org.

URGENT: PORTIONS OF HD 313 TO CLOSE TEMPORARILY TO ELK HUNTING EMERGENCY CLOSURE INCLUDES DECKARD FLATS, LITTLE TRAIL CREEK, OTHER AREAS

Given the recent significant weather event and large migration of elk, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks has issued an emergency closure of elk hunting in portions of Hunting District 313 including Crevice Mountain, Deckard Flats, Eagle Creek, and Little Trail Creek areas* effective Tuesday, Nov. 7 at noon through Sunday, Nov. 12.

The objective of this closure is to reduce the harvest pressure on elk in cases where large migrations occur during the general season to an area in which they are greatly vulnerable. This is now the case in hunting district 313 with significant snowfall in surrounding areas. Authority to institute this emergency closure in this area was granted by the Fish and Wildlife Commission in 2016.

This closure applies to elk only.
 The legal description of the closure boundary is included below.
 *Deckard - Little Trail Creek Elk Hunting Closure: Those portions of Park County lying within the following-described boundary: Beginning at the confluence of the Yellowstone River and Little Trail Creek northwest of Gardiner, then northeasterly along Little Trail Creek up to its headwaters, then easterly to the USFS Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness Boundary, then easterly along said boundary to the North Fork of Bear Creek, then southeasterly along said creek to its confluence with Bear Creek, then northerly along said creek to the confluence of Pine Creek, then easterly along said Creek to the intersection with the USFS Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness Boundary, then southerly along said boundary to the boundary with Yellowstone National Park, then westerly along said boundary to the confluence of the Yellowstone River and Reese Creek west of the town of Gardiner, then westerly along the Yellowstone River to its confluence with Little Trail Creek, the point of beginning
