New study: Butte cancer death rate higher than rest of state, new cancer rate about the same

By Robin Jordan

A new state health department study shows that while new cancer cases in Silver Bow County occur at the same rate as in the rest of the state, the rate of deaths due to cancer in the county was significantly higher than the state rate from 2012 to 2016.

And, the rate of deaths due to liver cancer in Silver Bow County was significantly higher than that in the rest of the state from 2002-2016, according to the study.

State epidemiologists Laura Williamson and Heather Zimmerman from the Montana Department of Health and Human Services (DPHHS) gave a presentation Dec. 19 before Butte-Silver Bow's Council of Commissioners on the recently completed study titled, "Cancer in Silver Bow County."

Butte-Silver Bow Health Officer Karen Sullivan told commissioners that the health department is in the midst of the latest EPA-mandated 5-year community health study. Data from that study will be released in spring 2019, she said. Because of recent public concern about cancer and neurological disease and their possible links to environmental risks, Sullivan said she asked the state DPHHS to dig deeper into cancer data in Butte and Silver Bow County.

Williamson said the data source for mortality rates came from Montana death records. Death certificates contain certain demographic information as well as the cause of death, according to the death certifier. While death certificates may list multiple causes of death as well as intermediate and other contributing causes, the researchers counted only those cases in which cancer was the primary cause.

Figures on the incidence of cancer came from the Montana Central Tumor Registry. Williamson said all cases of cancer in the state must be reported to the Registry, which was started in 1979. Ninety-five percent of all cases of cancer in the state are registered, including demographics and treatment information. Information collected includes the patient's address, but not their exposure history, such as where they have lived or worked. Williamson said the MCTR has only partial records on occupation and collects the patient's billing address, rather than the address of the residence.

Because mortality rates are often linked to other factors, such as access to care and treatment, the researchers considered the incidence rates more relevant in determining if there is a link to environmental contaminants.

The researchers looked at data from three five-year periods to determine changes rather than assessing change over the entire 15-year period.

The researchers looked at those cancers known to be caused by heavy metals exposure. Of those contaminants of concern for Butte, arsenic and cadmium are known to be carcinogenic and lead is listed as "probably" carcinogenic. Exposure to these elements has been linked with lung, bladder and kidney cancer. These substances have also been linked to skin cancers.

The MCTR does not have complete data on incidence of skin cancer because it is not a reportable cancer under Montana State Law, so the researchers did not include it in their report. The researchers did not look at brain cancer, they said, because its causes are not well known and clear links to heavy metal exposure have not been established, according to the Montana DPHHS.

The researchers found the most common types of cancer in Silver Bow County were also the most common in Montana and in the United States. Breast cancer was the most common among women, while prostate cancer was the most common among men. Lung and bronchus cancer was the second most common cancer in both men and women and colorectal cancer was third.

The data showed that statistically, incidence and mortality rates from these cancers were the same as the rest of the state, with a few exceptions.

- There were significantly fewer new cases of prostate cancer in Silver Bow County from 2007 to 2016. From 2002 to 2006, too few prostate cancer deaths occurred in Silver Bow County to calculate a stable rate.

- The rate of colorectal cancer deaths was significantly higher in Silver Bow County from 2002 to 2006.

- Although the rate of new liver cancer cases was statistically the same in Silver Bow CenturyLink Field is a great homefield advantage for the Seattle Seahawks.

The stadium, which was constructed in 2002, was designed to be really loud. The fans of the Seahawks cause such a raucous there that one time the celebration of a playoff touchdown by Marshawn Lynch registered on the Richter scale.

CenturyLink Field held the Guinness World Record for being the loudest stadium on the planet until that distinction was taken by Kansas City Chiefs fans at Arrowhead Stadium, another outstanding homefield advantage.

Except maybe in places of cold weather, homefield advantage is not because of the playing field. It has little to do with "sleeping in our home bed," as coaches like to say. It not usually because of restaurant food.

Homefield or homecourt advan-

BUTTE SPORTS

'City of Champions' could use some fan support

tage is almost always about noise. Lots and lots of noise.

Noise, not comfortable home surroundings for the home team, is why the Saints hardly ever lose in the Superdome.

Crowd noise is one of the components that makes it so hard for visiting teams to beat Butte High at Naranche Stadium. Loud Butte High fans take advantage of the stadium acoustics to make it hard for opposing receivers, running backs and linemen to hear their quarterback signals.

Crowd noise, and not the officials who are generally blamed, is usually the reason some high school gyms provide a huge advantage to the home team. Usually.

You don't even have to be at home to have the homecourt advantage if your crowd is loud enough. Just ask the Butte Central girls' basketball team from last March. The Maroons played Hardin in the semifinals of the Class A State Tournament in Great Falls, and the Bulldogs had a huge advantage because their crowd was insanely loud.

The BC players and coaches even admitted to being thrown off by the crowd, and that certainly played a part in the Bulldogs' 48-40 win over the Maroons.

That brings us to Friday, Dec. 21. That is the day that the Flathead Braves from Kalispell Flathead held a decided homecourt advantage over Butte High in a boys' basketball game played at the Butte Civic Center.

While Butte High's girls' team got the small home crowd riled up with one of their best home performances in several years by beating Flathead 53-29 in the opener of the varsity doubleheader, the Bulldog boys had very little support in the nightcap.

A lot of that was because the Bulldogs were playing poor. They could not make a shot or free throw to save their lives, and coach Luke Powers benched all of his starters in favor of junior varsity players late in the second quarter.

Powers said he did that because the team was playing without any energy, and he wanted to send his players a message.

The message also got to the fans. About half the Butte crowd left at halftime. Even the Butte High band packed up and left the game, and that is absolutely mind blowing.

You should not blame the students in the band for leaving. The culture at Butte High basketball games is just not what it used to be, and that is kind of sad.

If the band members would watch a Duke basketball game on television, they might see how fun being involved in a basketball game can actually be.

After the crowd dwindled away, Butte High's 16-point halftime deficit grew to 19 points at 36-17 midway through the third quarter.

Then, something remarkable happened. The Bulldogs came back.

Butte High went on a 14-1 run to get back in the game early in the fourth quarter. The Bulldogs tied the game at 45 with 3 minutes, 6 seconds left in the game when Danny McCloskey scored off a great pass by Kash Kelly.

I have been covering the Butte High basketball team for about two decades, and I have never seen the Bulldogs overcome a 19-point deficit to tie the game against anybody. Not even close.

If you were watching such a comeback by a home team on television, the crowd would be booing berserk. The score on the bottom of the screen would be bouncing around because the arena would be rocking.

The reaction to Butte High tying the game at the Civic Center, though, more closely resembled the applause for a nice tee shot on the 13th hole at the Desert Classic.

Had the Bulldogs had any kind of home court advantage, it would have surely pushed the Butte boys on to victory. When a team blows a 19-point lead, it almost always loses on the road.

Instead, it was the Braves fans who were loud. In addition to the fans who yelled that the Braves were getting ripped off with every single bounce of the ball, the sub-varsity teams from Kalispell were standing and cheering the Braves on.

A few in the Butte High student section tried to get the crowd going, but the Butte kids are so beaten down by administrators doubling as the fun police that they are afraid to say anything. Any cheer that doesn't begin with "two, four, six, eight" will subject the students to at least the threat of ejection from the arena.

If you think that is an exaggeration, go to a game and see for yourself.

Flathead overcame free throw woes of its own, and the Braves pulled out a 55-51 victory. As the road team sank five straight shots from the charity stripe, you could have heard a pin drop at the storied Butte arena.

One longtime Butte sports observer called the display an "embarrassing example for the 'City of Champions.' Butte used to have pride in its support for the local kids' teams."

That is true. The Civic Center used be worth at least a few baskets for the home team. Sometimes it was worth even more than that.

From 2004 through 2008, Butte High's boys hardly ever lost at game at the Civic Center, and a large part of that was the crowd, particularly the "Civic Center Psychos," as the student section called itself.

Hopefully those days are not gone for good. The Bulldogs didn't have a good December, but you have to believe that the talented and experienced team will compete when they play in January.

The Bulldogs could use a boost from their fans, though.

The Class AA State tournament will be played at the Civic Center this year, and wouldn't it be fun if our home teams were there?

Surely, the local crowd will come out if they are. That crowd should first come out to help cheer them on to the tournament.

If the Bulldogs win, fans will come. Wouldn't it be niche, however, if the "City of Champions" wasn't such a front running fan base these days?

Save the front running for Cowboys and Seahawks fans, and root on the local teams when they need their fans most.

While we certainly cannot expect the local crowd to take the Guinness World Record from Arrowhead Stadium, at least we could do is try to make the Civic Center as loud as Naranche Stadium.

It is either that or we throw that "City of Champions" moniker away for good.

Carousel Corner

By Jim Ayers

It's the start of a New Year for everyone and a chance to look back at the old year. The Carousel has only been operating for six months. We are still an infant ourselves. We have learned a lot about how to operate a carousel and of course how not to. Like any new business we have had to make changes as we go forward. Like any business we must keep our operating expenses down and try different ideas to generate attendance. Our birthday party packages are the number one source of business these days. We have hosted quite a diverse group of people from toddlers to seniors. One of the big surprises has been the number of adults riding the carousel. They are enjoying themselves as much as any of the children.

Santa Claus was a big hit. We plan to continue having him visit in the future. Hopefully visiting the Carousel at Christmas will become a family tradition. There have been a lot of families stopping by the new playground. If you haven't checked it out it's a pretty cool (especially this time of year) place to spend some time.

We plan to hold some type of event each month at the Carousel. This month we are pretty busy arranging the Gala, which is on the 19th. Tickets are going fast for this fun evening so be sure to stop by the Carousel, Paul Bunyan's or give Michelle Brennick a call at 406-490-8207.

The Carousel will be closed for maintenance from January 3rd until the 15th. We will still be open for parties so if you have a party planned or would like us to host something don't worry, we will be able to help you.

If you would like to make a donation or memorial our mailing address is PO Box 4133, Butte, MT 59702

Roth vs. Traditional 401(k): Which Is Right for You?

For many years, employees of companies that offered 401(k) plans only faced a couple of key decisions – how much to contribute and how to allocate their dollars among the various investment options in their plan. But in recent years, a third choice has emerged: the traditional versus Roth 401(k). Which is right for you?

To begin with, you need to understand the key difference between the two types of 401(k) plans. When you invest in a traditional 401(k), you put in pre-tax dollars, so the more you contribute, the lower your taxable income. Your contributions and earnings grow tax-deferred until you begin taking withdrawals, which will be taxed at your ordinary tax rate. With a Roth 401(k), the situation is essentially reversed. You contribute after-tax dollars, so you won't lower your taxable income, but withdrawals of contributions and earnings are tax-free at age 59-1/2, as long as you've held the account at least five years.

So, now that you've got the basics of the two types of 401(k) plans, which should you choose? There's no one right answer for everyone. You essentially need to ask yourself these questions: When do you want to pay taxes? And what will your tax rate be in the future?

If you're just starting out in your career, and you're in a relatively low income tax bracket, but you think you might be in a higher one when you retire, you might want to consider the Roth 401(k). You'll be paying taxes now on the money you earn and contribute to your Roth account, but you'll avoid being taxed at the higher rate when you start taking withdrawals. Conversely, if you think your tax rate will be lower when you retire, you might be more inclined to go with the traditional 401(k), which allows you to avoid paying taxes on your contributions now, when your tax rate is high.

Of course, you can see the obvious problem with these choices – specifically, how can you know with any certainty if your tax bracket will be lower or higher when you retire? Many people automatically assume that once they stop working, their tax liabilities will drop, but that's not always the case. Given their sources of retirement income from investment accounts and Social Security, many people see no drop in their tax bracket once they retire.

Since you can't see into the future, your best move might be to split the difference, so to speak. Although not all businesses offer the Roth 401(k) option, many of those that do will allow employees to divide their contributions between the Roth and traditional accounts. If you chose this route, you could enjoy the benefits of both, but you still can't exceed the total annual 401(k) contribution limit, which for 2019 is $19,000, or $25,000 if you're 50 or older.

You may want to consult with your tax advisor before making any decisions about a Roth or traditional 401(k) – or Roth and traditional 401(k) – but in the final analysis, these are positive choices to make, because a 401(k), in whatever form, is a great way to save for retirement. Try to take full advantage of it.

Well, Well, Well

Cold Sores

Judith Duryea

No matter the time of year in Butte, one thing you can say about our weather is that it's dry. Even if we have rain, by the next day, or even within a few hours, it's all evaporated and the humidity is back down in the cellar. A bothersome ailment that appears in dryness, whether it's hot in summer or cold in winter, is a cold sore, aka fever blisters. Even though they are related to shingles, one of the herpes viruses, they usually only appear around the mouth, but like shingles, they hurt like a torture and they feel like they are ruining your life.

Cold sores usually appear when a person is basically run down and the immune system is compromised, like during an illness when there is fever or when stress is high. Caused by the type one herpes simplex virus, cold sores are contagious; about 90 per cent of all Americans are exposed to the virus by the age of five. Once we're infected, herpes lies dormant in the body until something depresses our immune defenses and an outbreak occurs.

Not everyone who is run down will get a cold sore, but if you are prone to getting them, being prepared can be a large part of the cure. The best prevention for cold sores is a strong immune system, which requires quality nutrition, adequate rest, hydration with good water, low stress levels and a natural boost now and again with herbs and vitamins. Because many of us typically eat poorly, have trouble sleeping soundly, don't take vitamins regularly, and generally run our bodies down, it's no surprise cold sores crop up when we can least cope with them. Fortunately, some precautions can help us avoid them.

If you're feeling run down and you tend to get cold sores, avoid alcohol, which compromises the immune system and depletes some B vitamins as well as minerals. We can also avoid allergens, especially certain foods or chemicals. Many people cannot tolerate citrus, wheat or household chemicals, for example, so know what your triggers are and try to avoid what sends your body's chemistry into crisis mode.

In addition, we can attempt to avoid or lessen stress and make a conscious effort to get good quality sleep. We can also make a commitment to eat whole foods, eliminating fast, junky foods filled with fat and sugar, and drink adequate amounts of water. However, in the event that a cold sore does appear, there are natural remedies to help clear up the painful problem.

The amino acid L-lysine interferes with herpes simplex replication. Lysine occurs naturally in eggs, dairy, meat and fish, but it is also available in supplement and cream form. When combined with immune-enhancing Echinacea, bacteria-killing propolis and Vitamins A, C and E, along with zinc, which inhibits herpes and stimulates white blood cell activity, lysine can help clear up a cold sore quickly. If your affliction is recurrent, keep using lysine preventatively.

Because the herpes virus needs the amino acid arginine to thrive, limit foods that contain arginine to prevent an outbreak. Cola, chocolate, peanuts, cashews, beer and peas all contain arginine, so avoiding them during an outbreak will help hasten healing. If you notice outbreaks after eating a lot of these foods, eliminate them from your diet as a prevention.

Essential oils, used one drop at a time and applied directly to the sore, can also be effective. Tea tree, bergamot, geranium, rose and melissa oils have all proven helpful in healing a cold sore. Many lip balms created specifically for herpes contain one or more of these oils.

Melissa, also known as lemon balm, can be made into a tea and either drunk or used as a wash on the affected area. It also is available in pill form.

Herbs to boost the immune system and fight viruses are Echinacea, lomatium, cat's claw, thuja and St. John's wort. Many combinations are available as liquid extracts and pills. Use these when you are feeling run down, or during an outbreak, letting your immune system gather strength and then maintain its resistance with other personal changes in diet, rest and stress levels.

If you are prone to getting cold sores, slow down, practice good health habits and supplement with lysine and immune enhancing herbs, vitamins and minerals. Boost your immunity and keep cold sores away all year.

The Times credited Mattis with "persuading Mr. Trump not to pull out of NATO" and with working "to assure Europe that the United States remained committed to a common defense of the continent."

In Asia, Mattis gave the same assurances to US allies "alarmed at an assertive China and unpredictable North Korea" and at Trump's threats "to withdraw US forces there if Seoul didn't bear a larger share of the basing costs."

It was Mattis who "quietly smothered Trump's cruel ban on transgender troops and a self-aggrandizing military parade with Pentagon bureaucracy." In addition, he "helped delay America's abrogation of the Iran nuclear deal."

However, Mattis was unable to prevent upending decades of Middle East policy by moving the American Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem."

The Atlantic's David Frum wrote, "Trump holds his own word notoriously worthless, and sees no problem in doing the same to the nation's. His America is now disturbingly and mysteriously beholden to cash-rich counterparts: Russia, the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia."

Make the Most of the New Year

Perhaps what we need for 2019 as we look forward to a new, sparkling clean year is a fresh approach. We may have tried New Year resolutions, only to have them fade away before we are very far into the year. We may have vowed to exercise, eat healthier, take better care of ourselves, or all the above. What changes can we make to be sure that we make some progress this year, even if it is small?

A good first step is to look back at 2018. What did we accomplish this year? What could we do better? How can we build on the successes of the year immediately past? This may help us see what methods we used to meet our goals and what types of incentives or processes worked. None of us are one-size-fits-all and our individual personalities will give us the best guidance.

For example, some people are all or nothing types. They don't cut down on sugar, they eliminate it entirely. If you are this personality type and you want to add or eliminate something in the new year, be careful that it is doable in the long run. If sugar is an issue, cutting out desserts might be more appropriate than eliminating all sugar. Working out three times a week might be a goal you can manage while working out every day may be too much.

If you have had exercise goals in the past that did not come to fruition, see if you can figure out what worked for you and build on that. Maybe you had an exercise buddy who is no longer available. See if you can find another. If weather was a factor, consider an indoor alternative like videos at home, indoor walking or joining a gym. If time seems to be the barrier, examine your entire schedule and see if there is a slot that can be dedicated to activity. Also look at exercise times that worked best for you in the past.

We may even be able to refrain some of our goals so that they are more attainable. Motivation can come from helping others rather than ourselves. If this sounds like you, think of a friend or family member who could benefit from an exercise program and put time and energy into assisting that person. You can be their support by walking or working out with them. You will reap double the rewards because you made a difference in someone's life.

The same can be true of eating a healthier diet. If your spouse, child or someone else in your household or close circle of friends has medical or weight issues making it desirable for them to make better food choices, you could be the support or example for them. If you eat out, you could figure out what restaurants and dishes are the best for healthy dining. You could spend time together meal planning, grocery shopping and even experimenting with low-fat cooking methods.

Looking for positive changes is still a great way to head into the New Year. Taking time to recognize what you have accomplished already and figuring out why you were successful will help you to make goals you can achieve, resulting in better of self-worth. Once you have taken the time to see where you are and how you got there, you may realize you don't have as far to go as you thought.

Pat yourself on the back, acknowledge your successes and analyze your methods. Then set out some attainable goals. If you have been on the right track, a goal can be maintaining progress. If you are realistic and make the right choices, you are sure to continue to improve and feel good about yourself all year long. Happy New Year!

Cancer Study

County as the rest of the state from 2007 to 2016, the mortality rate for liver cancer was significantly higher in Silver Bow County.

To determine if cancer risk is higher in certain regions of the county, researchers compared the number of observed cancer cases in each of the 8 census tracts. For the years 2009 to 2016, the number of observed cancer cases was statistically the same as the rest of Montana in all census tracts except tract 6, which encompasses the area of town south of Interstate 90 and west of Harrison Avenue/ Highway 2 stretching down past the airport., which was 19 percent higher than expected.

The higher number of cases for census tract 6, researchers said, may be caused by the fact that if patient billing addresses did not match existing address files and placed in an exact map location, it was placed at the center of the zip code area, which is in tract 6. Likewise, if the address was a post office box, it was placed at the center of the zip code area.

The report said thirty-nine cases were placed in tract 6 because the exact location of their addresses could not be determined. Thus, the true number of cases observed in census tract 6 "may be as low as 224, which is not significantly more than expected.

Williamson said there were important differences between the state study and one published recently by independent researcher Suzanne McDermott of the University of South Carolina. Both showed mortality rates from cancer were higher for Silver Bow County than for the rest of the state, but the McDermott study indicated more grim figures.

For one thing, Williamson said, the McDermott study grouped figures for Butte-Silver Bow and Anaconda-Deer Lodge counties. Although McDermott used the same mortality rate data as the state study, her study counted cancer deaths even if cancer was not listed as the primary cause of death.

Williamson while both studies are accurate, they cannot be compared as "apples to apples."

The Montana DPHHS is in conversations with Anaconda health officials about doing a similar cancer study there, but no timeline has been set.

Public health legacy of 1918 Influenza Pandemic subject of Archives talk

The Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives will continue its Brown Bag Lunch series on Wednesday, January 9, with a presentation by Janelle Olberding entitled "Lasting Legacy: Public Health, Butte, and the Aftermath of the Influenza Pandemic of 1918." In the last months of 1918, influenza killed approximately two percent of Butte's residents.

Besides its physical toll, the disease left orphaned children, widowed husbands and wives, and emotional scars. The influenza pandemic of 1918 also had lasting effects on public health and healthcare systems in Montana and beyond. Even still, the pandemic is largely overlooked in American history and memory. This presentation will explore why and will illustrate how the pandemic is not just a part of history, but of Butte's legacy.

Janelle M. Olberding is an independent historian, writer, avid reader, part-time educator, and lifelong learner. Her interest in communicable disease was piqued while working in public health, and she began studying its effects on culture and history as a graduate student at Norwich University. She currently works in higher education and lives in Glendive, Montana with her husband and daughter. The presentation will begin at noon and run about an hour at the Archives, 17 W. Quartz. Guests are encouraged to bring a sack lunch. Coffee and water will be provided. Brown Bag Lunches are held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month.

Upcoming lectures will focus on topics of local interest. For more information, contact the Archives at 782-3280.

This Week In Labor History

The only effective answer to organized greed is organized labor.
 -Thomas R. Donahue, ALF-CIO President

Wednesday, Jan 2:

Conference of 23 industrial Unionists in Chicago leads to formation of IWW, the Industrial Workers of the World, fondly known as the Wobblies. From its beginning the IWW was dedicated to Democracy, Free Speech, the working class. -1905
 An underground explosion at Sago Mine in Tallmansville, W. Va., traps 12 miners and cuts power to the mine. 11 men die, mostly by asphyxiation. The mine had been cited 273 times for safety violations over the prior 23 months but share holder profits outweighed all safety concerns and the workers paid the price. -2006

Thursday, Jan 3:

The ship Thetis arrives in Hawaii with 175 Chinese field workers bound to serve for 15 years at $3 per month. -1852
 AFL-CIO American Institute for

Free Labor Development employees Mike Hammer and Mark Pearlman are assassinated by Right-Wingers in El Salvador along with a Peasant Workers' Union leader with whom they were working on a land reform program. -1981

Friday, Jan 4:

Angered by increasing farm foreclosures, members of Iowa's Farmers Holiday Association threaten to lynch banking representatives and law officials who institute foreclosure proceedings for the duration of the Great Depression. -1933
 8,000 New York City social workers strike, demand better conditions for welfare recipients. -1965

Saturday, Jan 5:

Construction of the Golden Gate Bridge begins. 10 of the 11 deaths on the job came when safety netting beneath the site, the first ever use of such equipment, failed under the stress of a scaffold that had fallen. 19 other workers were saved by the net over the course of construction. They became members of the (informal) Halfway to Hell Club. -1933

 "Fiscal conservative" and "Free-marketeer" President Reagan produces the nation's first trillion-dollar budget, projecting 1988 outlays of $1,024.3 billion, revenues of $916.6 billion, and a deficit of $107.8 billion. By the end of his presidency Reagan increased the national debt 190% to over $2.9 trillion. Under Reaganomics the rich got richer and the poor got poorer. -1987

Sunday, Jan 6:

A strike was called at the Youngstown Sheet & Tube plant by its 8,000 workers. On January 7, strikers were joined by their wives and other family members on the picket line. Company guards attacked the crowd with tear gas and live fire murdering 3 unarmed peaceful strikers and wounding 25 others. -1916
 West Virginia miners launched a wildcat strike to protest the murder of their Union reform leader Joseph "Jock" Yablonski. -1970

Monday, Jan 7:

An explosion at Osage Coal and Mining Company's Mine Number 11 near Krebs, Okla. kills 100, injures 150 when an untrained worker accidentally sets off a stash of explosives. -1892

 Tom Mooney, IWW labor activist, who was framed by a company paid agent and falsely convicted of murder in the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing in July 1916, was freed after 22 1/2 years in jail, granted an unconditional pardon by Governor Culbert Olson. -1939

Tuesday, Jan 8:

The AFL Iron and Steel Organizing Committee ends the "Great Steel Strike". 400,000 steelworkers had been striking for more than 3 months, demanding Union recognition. The greedy Capitalists falsely accused the exploited workers of being "Communists" and "un-American" for wanting fair wages and less deadly working conditions. -1920
 In San Jose, California, teachers joined with striking students to oppose the Vietnam War. -1969

The Great Outdoors

Bird season provided exercise, if not much game

By Paul Vang

Heavy snow was falling outside my office window, and on the afternoon of Christmas Eve day, Christmas music kept things cheerful. I was scheming for one more outing for pheasants or other upland birds before the season closed on New Year's Day. I have to confess this hasn't been a particularly successful hunting season from the standpoint of bringing home game to put in the freezer. I've had lots of outings, with good exercise and fresh air, so those outings weren't a waste of time.

I follow a Facebook group that's devoted to upland bird hunting and someone posed the question as whether they're disappointed if they don't come home with game. There was a big response with people saying that for them it's more about dog work than anything else, so they're perfectly happy if they get to see their dogs working, perhaps liking it even better if someone else is along to do the shotgunning.

I totally understand that sentiment, and I guess that's what keeps me getting up early on cold, dark mornings for outings in which I've been unsuccessful. Still, I confess that I also get a lot of satisfaction when I swing my shotgun at a departing bird and see it fold and drop to the ground.

Nevertheless, I don't regret any of those outings for fresh air and exercise, as I've always seen some game and interesting sights, and moments of frustration, too.

On a recent trip I was up early and on the road on a sub-zero morning, hoping I'd get shooting at ducks on a warm water spring creek I've been privileged to hunt.

Kiri, my Labrador retriever and hunting partner, and I made a wide swing across a field to approach a favorite spot on the creek where I almost always see mallards. We got to the spot and birds start flushing, but I'm momentarily confused as the birds aren't ducks. They were pheasants, probably half a dozen—all roosters—hunkered down in the tall grasses on the creek bank where temperatures, moderated by the warm water, were probably 30 degrees warmer than the ambient temps. I finally collected my wits long enough to get a shot off at a rocketing cock pheasant, and missed. Then the other barrel misfired, probably because of the frigid morning.

That's kind of how my hunting season has been going.

The upland bird season is now over. The waterfowl season for ducks and geese is still on, closing temporarily at sunset this Sunday, January 6, then reopening on January 12, before closing for good at sunset on January 16. That juggling of closing dates is done to have the season's end coincide with another weekend.

Considering the daily avalanche of news out of our nation's capital, with the chaos and upheavals, those hunting outings are a good way to not only get good exercise, but a day in the outdoors helps us keep some balance in our lives, or keep our heads screwed on right, as I often think of it. It's too bad the general hunting seasons don't run longer, now that I think of it, as we not only have the news from Washington D.C., but the Montana Legislature is back in session.

Issues that will come up, both in the Lege, but in the new Congress as well, will be familiar, including the Land and Water Conservation Fund, that funnels off-shore oil tax revenues to states for public land projects, such as fishing access, land acquisitions, etc. Montana's delegation were working as a team to get LWCF re-enacted, and there was overwhelming Congressional support for it—except for Sen. Mike Lee (R-Utah) who held it up because he wanted language added to forbid further National Monument designations in Utah.

Sen. Lee also held up legislation that would have given federal recognition to Montana's Little Shell Indian tribe. I guess I can hope that Sen. Lee got a Christmas stocking with lumps of coal, though more likely he already had big campaign contributions from energy companies.

Happy New Year, I guess.

What's Cooking

Steak Supper in Foil Package By Debbie Sorensen

Getting into the business of a new year can be quite the deal I've found. I've decided that I'm over, making resolutions. Too much angst, anxiety and baloney. Speaking of baloney, makes me think of another meal idea, which I'll take in a different meat direction. I'll just move into the area of a more economical beef, which today, will be chuck steak.

While I'm thinking of being more economical, I figure that I'll get this favorite do-ahead recipe prepared. This long-time family favorite comes from an old kitchen standard of years past, Betty Crocker's Cookbook of 1976 that I modified a bit. I can prepare this one-dish meal in the morning, refrigerate it and then slip it in to the oven, mid-afternoon and have it ready for a nice comfort meal on a winter night. Sounds like a good way to celebrate the New Year that lies ahead. Comforting and satisfying. Happy New Year.

Steak Supper in a Foil Package

- 1 ½ pound chuck steak 1 inch thick, cut into bite sized chunks
- 1 can Cream of Mushroom soup ½ - ¾ c. water
- 1 envelope dry onion soup mix 3 medium carrots, cut into chunks
- 2 stalks celery, cut in 2-inch pieces 5 medium potatoes, cubed

Heat oven to 450°. Place 24 x 18-inch piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil in baking pan; place pieces of meat on the foil.
 Stir together mushroom soup and onion soup mix; spread over meat. Top with vegetables; sprinkle water over vegetables. Fold foil over and seal all edges securely. Cook 1 ½ hours or until tender. Serves: 4-6

Toys for Tots releases statistics for Christmas 2018

The Southwest Montana Marine Corps League Detachment #724 would like to thank the generous people of Butte and southwest Montana for their donations to Toys for Tots this year.

Toy boxes and donation boxes for monetary donations were placed all over Butte in late October at stores, banks, car dealerships and other businesses.

The local program distributed 3,548 toys, 39 books and 1,599 stocking stuffers to needy children in the community. The total number of children who received toys was 1,138.

Toys were distributed in Butte to 268 families through Aware Inc.'s Mining City Christmas program. The Southwest Montana Marine Corps League also distributed toys to 30 families in Whitehall, 9 in Twin Bridges, 9 in Harrison and 9 Army Reserve families.

In Memory Norlene Holt

Norlene Holt, a founder and former owner of the Butte Weekly, died in her sleep Dec. 19 at her home in Chehalis, WA. She was 76.

She was born Nov. 10, 1942, one of the seven children of Norma (Blodget) and Graham Holt. Holt and her dear companion, veteran newspaperman Virgil Boehler, met in Sidney in the 1980s. Boehler and Holt were involved with several print publications in Montana. In 1993 they and one of his sons, the late Cole Boehler and his wife, formed Continental Publications Management, publishers of the Butte Weekly. Virgil died in a traffic accident in Livingston in December 2000. Holt became publisher of the Weekly, with the late Rick Foote as editor. Her attitude was a publisher did not interfere with the news side, giving Foote total freedom to write what he wanted. Holt Publishing Group issued the late John Astle's book, "Only in Butte: Stories Off the Hill," in 2004. She loved Butte, often saying it is "the friendliest town I've ever been in." Norlene was a people person, one reason she liked ad sales, walking to Uptown businesses and driving to others all over town, talking to owners about their problems and challenges.

She served at least a couple of terms as president of the Uptown Association, the precursor of Mainstreet Uptown Butte. Appointed by Chief Executive Judy Jacobson, Norlene served several years on the Butte-Silver Bow Parking Commission.

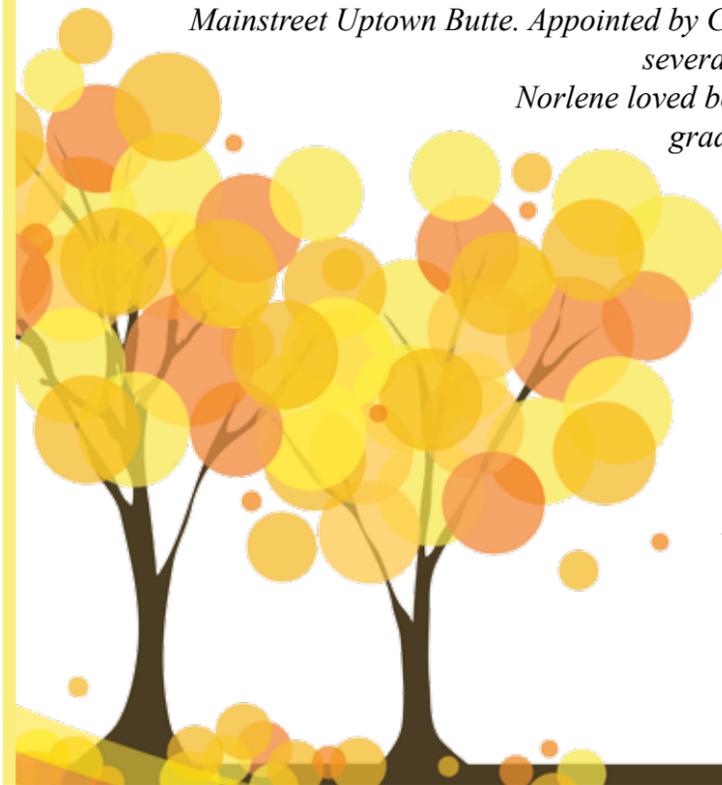

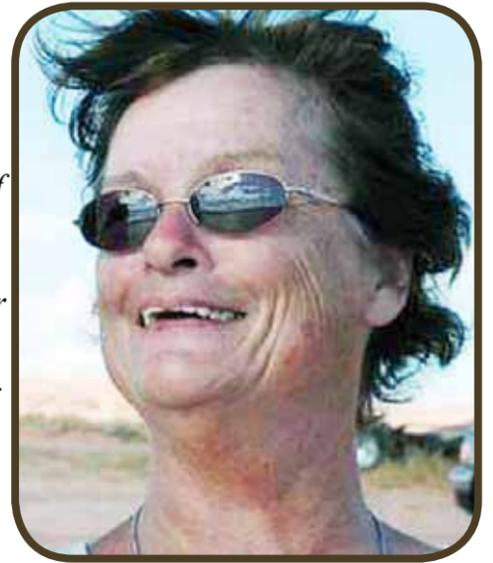

Norlene loved being a mother to her kids and their friends. Her youngest daughter, Kelie Wurden, graduated from Butte High School. Kelie remembers "if any of my friends needed help, they knew they could count on Mom."

For Easter 2014, Norlene drove to Chehalis to be with her sons and daughters and her beloved grandchildren. En route home to Butte, she had a heart attack; her car left the road near Olympia, and she suffered serious injuries. Doctors called her survival "miraculous."

However, it did not surprise her friends who knew Norlene was one tough cookie. She retired to her farm outside Chehalis where she has enjoyed being matriarch of her extended family, with camping and excursions to the beach being her favorite activities.

Robin and David Jordan bought the Butte Weekly in December 2014 and sold it two years later to its current owners Linda Anderson and her husband Robert. A graveside service was conducted Dec. 28 in Chehalis. Send condolences to keliewurden@gmail.com

Butte friends may donate to the World Museum of Mining, one of Norlene's favorite places, or to a charity of their choice.

Avalanche Safety and Snow Update

Many backcountry enthusiasts seek out deep snow in mountain terrain on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest. Whether on snowmobile, skis, snowboard, or other devices, unstable snow in steep avalanche-prone terrain can be dangerous and even deadly. Although snow depth and structure around the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest varies significantly, the majority of the Forest has a shallow and weak snowpack. The forecast is calling for snow throughout the holiday week which will add stress to this weak snowpack and may increase the likelihood of avalanches. If you are planning on enjoying the new snow over the holidays, please be very cautious and heed the following advice:

- GET THE GEAR: Ensure everyone has an avalanche transceiver, shovel, and probe on their person and knows how to use them.
- GET THE TRAINING: Take an avalanche course.
- GET THE FORECAST: Make a riding plan based on the current avalanche and weather forecast.
- GET THE PICTURE: If you see recent avalanche activity, cracks in the snow surface, or collapsing of the snowpack, this means unstable snow exists and riding on or below steep slopes is dangerous.
- GET OUT OF HARM'S WAY: Limit your exposure to dangerous terrain. Travel one at a time on risky slopes. Don't group up in avalanche runout zones. Don't help your friend find a lost ski or get unstuck in hazardous terrain; keep your distance so one of you can rescue the other in the event of an avalanche. Forest Service avalanche specialists advise avoiding avalanche terrain, between 30 and 45 degrees steepness, as the most effective way to safely recreate when snow stability is poor. Signs of recent avalanches, cracking, and/or collapsing of the snow, otherwise known as "wumphing", are what avalanche specialists call "bullseye data" - clear warning signs that the snow is unstable. Trails and low-angle meadows, without steep slopes above, are safer terrain choices at times of poor snow stability, as is avoidance of avalanche runout zones below steep slopes. For more information on snow conditions in your area contact your local Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest office. More information is also available through the following links: www.avalanche.org, www.mtavalanche.com/education, and www.missoulaavalanche.org/education-events.
