Camping season begins Memorial Day Weekend

Memorial Day weekend marks the kickoff for outdoor summer recreation and camping season. The Beaverhead-Deerlodge covers over 3.3 million acres in seven counties of Southwest Montana and offers an abundance of recreational opportunities for people to enjoy. Visitors will find campgrounds, trails, and cabins open and available.

In the Butte-Whitehall Area, Beaverdam, Lowland, Delmoe Lake, Whitehouse, Pigeon Creek, and Toll Mountain Campgrounds will be open. Water will be available at Beaverdam, Delmoe Lake and Whitehouse. Homestake and Elkhorn picnic areas will be open as well with water available at Homestake.

Thompson Park is open daily from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. daily.

There are three picnic areas and two trailheads that access 25 miles of non-motorized trails, including the Milwaukee Road. The park is co-managed with Butte-Silver Bow through October. The Thompson Park Eagles Nest disc golf course is the only authorized course open to the public for use on the National Forest.

Sheepshead Recreation Area, north of Butte, offers fishing and picnicking for groups and will open June 8. The pavilions at Sheepshead and Freedom Point can be reserved for weddings, picnics, and other types of day-use activities. Call the Butte Ranger District for reservations.

Most trailheads are open; however trail access may be minimal at higher elevations due to high snow levels. Trail crews and volunteers have cleared Thompson Park, portions of the Continental Divide National Scenic Trail and Rawhide Trail in the Elkhorns; however trail users should expect to find blocked trails due to the high number of downed trees. Contact the Butte Ranger District to find out trail conditions or to report blocked trails. Forest Service crews will begin clearing the Continental Divide National Scenic Trail in June. A variety of maps including Whitetail-Pipestone, Thompson Park, CDNST, and forest maps are available at the Butte Ranger District as well as downloadable maps from Avenza for android and iPhones.

For updates on access to recreation sites and trails, contact the Forest Service office in Butte at (406) 494-2147, or visit 1820 Meadowlark Lane.

For the Georgetown Lake, Philipsburg and Deer Lodge Valley: Philipsburg Bay, Piney, Cable, and Lodgepole Campgrounds managed by Big Sky Recreation will be open and fees charged. Spring Hill will open by Memorial Day. Racetrack, East Fork, Copper, and Spillway Campgrounds are open. Echo Lake picnic area is open. Orofino should be open by early June.

Many popular spots like the Toll Mountain Campground southeast of Butte are open and ready for guests to arrive for Memorial Day Weekend fun. Photo by Robin Jordan

Flint Creek Campground will be closed for the 2018 season for reconstruction of the road and camp spurs. The work is being completed through funding from Tri-County Resource Advisory Committee and Anaconda Job Corps. Certain sites within these campgrounds may be closed as hazard tree removal continues, visitors are asked to respect those closures. Grassy Point and Red Bridge will be available for use by Memorial Day along with the day use sites around Georgetown Lake. Day Use fees will be charged at Grassy, Red Bridge, Piney and Philipsburg Bay beginning Memorial Day weekend.

Racetrack Road should be open by Memorial Day. The road washed out in 2017, but crews have completed work to repair the road. The cabin should be accessible by Memorial Day, but above the cabin access may be limited to snow levels.

Most trailheads are open; however trail access may be minimal at higher elevations due to high snow levels and a high number of downed trees at low and mid elevations. Trail crews will begin work in June to clear

Things to know before you go!

Be prepared for changing weather conditions and bring potable drinking water for dispersed camping and hiking activity. Contact your local Forest Service office to find current status of camping opportunities and trail/road conditions. Spring weather can be very unsettled.

Stay away from soft and muddy roads, as this is unsafe and can damage the roadbed, leading to expensive repairs. Driving around snow drifts is not permissible because of the damage it causes to vegetation and soil. If you get stuck, help may not be available due to limited cell phone coverage when out of all the residential areas. When driving in the outdoors, visitors are encouraged to notify the Forest Service of any flooding conditions, plugged culverts, downed trees or road damage so that repairs can be made or trees removed.

Numerous roads on the forest have seasonal closures for wildlife such as elk calving area. Please respect closures and wait until it is legal to use those roads. Respect private property, easements through private lands need to be respected to ensure access to adjacent public lands. Forest maps are a great tool to get acquainted with legal routes and roads for motorized travel.

Many trails may not be open at higher elevations due to mud, snow, or downed trees. Stay on the trail and do not create new trails to get around hazards. Expect many trails to be impassable from fallen trees.

Be careful with fire and to never leave a campfire unattended, and make sure your coals are cool to the touch before you leave. Fireworks on National Forest system lands are not permissible.

Look up, look down and all around when recreating in the forest due to the potential for trees to fall. Here are a couple of handy tips: Be aware of your surroundings and avoid dense patches of dead trees. Trees can fall without warning; place tents and park vehicles in areas where they will not be hit if a tree falls; Stay out of the forest when there are strong winds that could blow down trees. If you are already in the forest when winds kick up, head to a clearing out of reach of any potential falling trees.

Forest-wide, there are special rules for storing of food and refuse at your campsite to avoid bear encounters. All food and refuse, including liquids other than water, must either be stored in a vehicle, an approved container, or hung 10 feet off the ground and four feet out from any tree or support pole. Free bear-resistant containers are available for loan at the Forest Service offices.

The Beaverhead-Deerlodge NF offers 25 backcountry cabins for rent. You'll need to bring food and bedding, but most cabins come with firewood, beds, and utensils. To rent a cabin, call toll free, 1-877-444-6777 or go online to <http://www.recreation.gov/>. Prior to going to your cabin contact the local Ranger District Office during office hours to determine current conditions and access issues.

Remember, too, that cross-country driving by motorcycles, all-terrain vehicles, pickups and other "motorized, wheeled vehicles" is prohibited in the National Forests of Montana. Vehicles must stay on existing roads and trails. In some places, vehicles can travel only on specially designated routes. The Forest Service has a brochure explaining the travel rules as well as travel maps to help travelers know which routes they may travel. Also children are required to wear helmets when riding these vehicles.

For more information contact your local Forest Service office or go online to www.fs.usda.gov/bdnf.

Colt Anderson shows kids how to follow their dreams

Bill Foley

At a high school softball game last week, I stood by Colt Anderson as he was texting me information about his football camp next month.

"Oops," he said, "that's Nick Foles, not you."

Yes, Anderson almost mistakenly sent the text to Nick Foles, the Super Bowl LII MVP, instead of me.

Surprisingly, that would not have been the first time I have been mixed up with Foles, who has the best name in the NFL and is a former teammate of Anderson.

Since Foles stepped in for an injured Carson Wentz and led the Eagles to the Super Bowl title, I have often been mistakenly tagged or mentioned in tweets meant for the quarterback.

Foles' Twitter handle is @Nick-Foles, while mine is @Foles74. It's an easy mistake.

Here's the thing, though, most of the tweets were mean. Yes, the tweets meant to be sent to the guy who won the Super Bowl were, for the most part, were telling me to take a hike.

I have also been mistaken for the Bill Foley who owns, among many other things, the NHL's Vegas Golden Knights. I get these tweets even though my Twitter profile specifically says I'm not the "rich Bill Foley."

Yes, those tweets are also nasty, and not because the rich

Bill Foley is one of those guys who thinks he can own a mountain. I've been mistakenly tweeted at because an NHL player was arrested for domestic violence, and I have been mistakenly tweeted at because people didn't like the name of the team.

Not one person has tweeted to congratulate me for the amazing run through the Stanley Cup Playoffs my Golden Knights are making.

When it comes to pro sports, we focus more on the negative than the positive. We spend more time rooting against teams than we do cheering for them.

We always hear about players with a severe lack of character instead of the ones who have it spilling out of their pockets.

If it were the other way around, Colt Anderson would be the lead on SportsCenter every night.

Anderson is a free agent after spending nine NFL seasons with the Vikings, Eagles, Colts and Bills. He has played long enough to earn an NFL pension, and he has made a pretty good chunk of money.

Sure, Anderson hasn't made Foles money, but he's done OK. Plus, Anderson owns the Mo Club in Missoula and, along with his brother and friend, he started the UpTop Clothing Co.

In case you haven't noticed, every kid in town is currently wearing something made by the UpTop Clothing Co.

So, Anderson has clearly done enough that he could retire and stay out of the limelight forever.

Anderson, though, is the favorite player of every boy and girl in town, and he's using that to better the community and beyond. Along with his wife Keelie, Anderson started the Colt Anderson Dream Big Foundation.

The foundation is dedicated to creating positive change for children by providing resources, innovative opportunities and experiences that will empower them to find their passion to dream big and find success.

The foundation is putting on a two-day event late next month. It includes a camp and a family fun day.

What Anderson is doing is such an amazing thing for children, especially the children of Butte who can really use a role model. There is no way you can put a price tag on having a positive influence in your life.

But Anderson is much more a great role model for kids. He's a role model for every person who has ever battled with self-doubt.

The Mining City has turned out tons of athletes who were bigger, stronger and faster than Colt Anderson. But Anderson dreamed big, and he had the heart and desire to match those dreams.

In 2003, Anderson played running back and safety for a Butte High football team that lost all nine of its games. The team, though, was better than record would indicate. Teams knew they were in a fight when the game was over.

They specifically knew they played against a tough kid named Colt Anderson, who went on to play in the Montana East-West Shrine Game.

When smaller schools like Montana Tech were offering scholarship money, Anderson dreamed bigger. He didn't listen to those of us who thought he should play NAIA football and start instead of sit on the bench for four years in Missoula.

At UM, Anderson quickly made a name for himself. He went from walk on to All-American to legend. By the end of his senior season in 2008, Anderson was revered by Griz Nation every bit as much as he is loved in the Mining City.

Still, Anderson dreamed bigger. When the NFL draft came and went in April of 2009, Anderson signed an undrafted contract with the Vikings. When he didn't make the 53-man roster after training camp, Anderson still hung onto his dream.

He spent a season and a half on the Vikings practice squad before signing with Philadelphia, where his hard-nosed style quickly won over the toughest fan base in all of sports. When the playoffs rolled around, Anderson was a team captain.

Even though we keep stats of every little thing in sports, you will not find a list of players who went from the practice squad to team captain in the same season. If you did, it would probably only contain one name, and that is because Anderson never stopped dreaming big.

He couldn't be stopped by a torn ACL or an arm that he badly broke twice. He still played in six NFL playoff games. He was the best special teams player in each one of those games, too.

Since he will turn 33 in October, Anderson could be at the end of his NFL run. He would still be one of the better special teams players in the league, but teams can find somebody who is 10 years younger do the same job for a quarter of the price.

Anderson still works out every morning, and he will be ready for the call from a team if and when it comes.

The worst thing anyone could do is bet against him.

Since his days as a Butte High Bulldog, Colt Anderson has been the epitome of dreaming big and following those dreams.

That is something that cannot be mistaken.

Memorial Day marks unofficial start of summer

By Robin Jordan

While Memorial Day is a somber holiday that celebrates the men and women of our armed services who gave the ultimate sacrifice to protect our country's freedom, for many it also marks the first long weekend of summer.

All over southwest Montana, folks will be headed for the woods or the lake for that first big outdoor adventure. This week, they'll be dreaming and planning for camping, fishing, boating, cooking on the open fire or the grill and good family fun in the great outdoors. It's been a long, wet, cold winter and almost everyone is hungry for some sunshine and fresh air.

As usual, though, we're keeping an eye on the weather. The Memorial Day Weekend is notorious in these parts for bringing nasty surprises that can ruin our outdoor plans.

More times than we can remember, we've headed out, full of anticipation, only to be thwarted by cold, rainy skies or, worse, by the dreaded late spring snowstorm. We've told the story many times of one Memorial Day Weekend when we decided to launch our sailboat at Canyon Ferry and ended up driving home with the boat in tow through a blizzard in Elk Park. Almost everyone has had one of those camping trips that ended up with wet tents, wet blankets and plenty of tears and grumbling before the family reluctantly heads home from the woods.

We haven't heard any forecasts warning of heavy snow, but we wouldn't bet against another weekend of grey skies, cool temperatures and frequent, heavy rain. If last weekend is any indication of what's to come, we don't want to be out in the woods in a tent or out on the lake worrying about a possible thunderstorm.

So, we'll probably stay close to home this coming weekend. After all, we've got plenty to do if the weather doesn't turn foul. We've got most of the vegetable garden dug up and ready for planting and we found some beautiful squash and tomato plants at the Farmer's Market that are waiting in the greenhouse. We still need to get fertilizer to till into the soil and buy some seeds, but we should be ready to plant this weekend if the weather is warm and dry enough.

Once we've gone to the cemeteries and put flowers on the family graves, we'll probably take advantage of any good weather to take the dogs out to one of their favorite spots to get some exercise. Of course, we may have to go to one of our more remote spots, because we're sure the more popular camping areas will be filled with people out for the long weekend.

We hope you'll have a fun and safe Memorial Day Weekend. If you're going out to the woods, though, be sure you take along your winter coats and plenty of warm blankets. You never know if you'll need them.

A tax cut for the oligarchy

By George Waring

In late March Dean Baker published his first assessment of the effects of the GOP-Trump "tax reform."

For Baker, an economist, the act's main feature was a reduction in the corporate tax rate from 35 percent to 21 percent.

Why should we see this as "a huge giveaway to the rich?" Because they "own a grossly disproportionate share of stock."

Baker reports that "the richest 1 percent of households hold nearly 40 percent of stock shares, and the top 10 percent holds close to 80 percent." When four-fifths of corporate stocks are held by the richest 10%, it stands to reason that reducing the taxes corporations have to pay must benefit the rich. Cutting the corporate tax rate increases the wealth of the rich folks who own corporations.

Any reduction in corporate taxes means more money for the small minority of the population who are shareholders. The CEOs would get their increased income in the form of share buybacks. Or shareholders would get more income through dividend payouts. Or the rich would simply increase their wealth due to higher prices per share, because stock values would reflect the fact that corporations got to keep a larger portion of their profits.

The information contained in the preceding three paragraphs was not what Trump apologists like Secretary of the Treasury Stephen Mnuchin mentioned in their corporate tax cut press releases. Trump and his flacks argued that the people who would benefit the most from cutting corporate taxes would be ordinary workers. Their agreed upon lies emphasized that workers would see their wages increase by double or triple the size of the corporate tax cuts. Remember, the corporate tax was reduced by 40%. Would workers' wages really increase by 80% or 120%. How could any administration flak say this with a straight face?

As Dean Baker put it, "the argument was that the tax cut would prompt a flood of investment that would increase the size of the US capital stock by roughly a third, after a decade."

Baker wrote that Trump's Council of Economic Advisors argued that this big increase in corporate capital investments would translate into greater productivity per worker, and this greater productivity would naturally be reflected by big pay increases. In fact, they "projected that these wage gains would increase annual income by between $4,000 and $9,000 for an average household." Would that wage gain occur each year for the next decade? That's what an annual income increase would seem to forecast.

What's wrong with this story? "Historically," Baker writes, "there has been little relationship between after-tax rates of profit and investment." His reason for this pessimism? "We did this experiment before. In 1986 Congress lowered the corporate income tax rate from 48 percent to 36 percent. There was no flood of investment following this rate cut. In fact, measured as a share of GDP, investment fell slightly over the next two years."

Let's go over that again. Cutting the corporate tax rate by 25% in 1986 actually resulted in a decline in corporate investment. The GOP-Trump cut taking effect this year in 2017 was 40%. Should we expect another decline in corporate investment through 2019?

The lies coming from Trump's folks must have seemed too fantastic for the corporate executives about to benefit from their 40% cut in corporate taxes. So, they manufactured a diversion.

Baker writes:

"To convince us that workers would share in the benefits of the tax cut, rather than go into shareholders' pockets, many major companies announced one-time bonuses. In almost all cases the bonuses were just a small fraction of the money received from the tax cut.

"For example, AT&T was looking at annual tax savings of more than $2.3 billion. Their one-time bonus of $1,000 for 200,000 workers would come to $200 million, or less than one-tenth of their tax savings in a single year. Apple's one-time bonus would come to less than 5 percent of its annual savings."

Regarding the aftermath of the corporate tax cut, Robert Reich wrote in February that Trump's promise that it would result in huge investments and higher wages "was proving to be as truthful as his promise to release his tax returns."

Reich reported that corporations were using almost all their tax savings for stock buybacks. The $89 billion "surge in buy-backs" was more than double the amount of buybacks in the same period last year.

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

As I write this, our projected opening day is just a month away, with a lot of work to be done in the meantime.

I am particularly happy to announce that Mike Sawicki, the master carpenter who has been a volunteer since the building was started, has accepted the position of operations manager. Mike has a head bursting with ideas to keep our Carousel a popular memory maker in the tradition of Columbia Gardens, as well as the organized mind and practical skills to make them happen.

The last week has seen the first of the horses hung on the carousel itself, an amazing sight after all the years since the first one was carved to completion. It is a slow process, discovering pieces that don't fit quite right, and entire horses that don't fit in their intended places.

The inner row of ponies is the smallest, limited in size by the vertical rods that hold the floor. The carvers were working from general dimensions and had no real feel for the limitations imposed by the way the mechanism is built. Beautiful expressions of artistic flair in the back legs and tails ran into the reality of being too long for the available space.

Not to worry, though, a little practical imagination and creativity is giving each position a colorful horse, eager for riders young and old. This week will probably see the last of the horses moved from their long-time stable in the Butte Plaza Mall to their new home.

Saturday also saw our clearance sale at the old carving room in the mall, as we prepare to move all our activities to the new building. We will be forever grateful to Alana Ferko and the Hyman

Family Trust for their patience and generous support of our project.

Wiring of the building and mechanism is another project that continually bumps up against unforeseen obstacles. We are blessed with some talented and hard-working electricians who are working their way through them.

The wheelchair lift was installed last Saturday, giving anyone with limited mobility the chance to enjoy the merriment going around and round.

The anticipation and enthusiasm for this project is incredible. I posted a 14-second video on Facebook of our test horse, Charlie, in motion. It has been viewed over 8,100 times for a total of nearly 37 hours.

Contributions to the project may be made by PayPal from our Facebook page, www.facebook.com/pages/Spirit-of-Columbia-Gardens-Carousel, or the website, <http://www.buttecarousel.com/>, by mail to P.O. Box 782, Butte, 59703, or in person at the Mall shop. We are a 501(c) 3 non-profit that also may qualify for employer matching donations.

If you have any comments or suggestions, or would like to volunteer to help, please let us know! Call the office at 494-7775, or stop by the site. We are not there all the time, but as much as we can!

Call Forest Service office in Philipsburg, (406) 859-3211 for more information.

Impacts from last season's fires will be felt across portions of the Anaconda-Pintler Wilderness for years to come. Many trails in the NE section of the wilderness (Pintler Ranger District) were burned over and many of the bridges and other structures were damaged or destroyed. Restoration and repairs began last fall, with emergency funding allocated to continue repairs and restoration for the next several years. While trails and infrastructure were severely impacted in some locations, the burned area remains open at this time. Be extra careful about travelling through the area and choose campsites with an eye to fire damaged trees.

Some of the Anaconda-Pintler Wilderness trailheads are accessible at this point, but not all. Visitors will likely encounter snow and downed trees within a couple miles of trailheads, but most lakes are still snow covered. As a reminder, use of stock within the Anaconda-Pintler Wilderness is prohibited on the Pintler District April 1 through July 1. Check with Forest Service offices in Wise River, Philipsburg, Sula or Wisdom for details as you plan your wilderness trip.

In the Big Hole area, some campgrounds will be available for use with limited services. Many roads and sites will still be under snow and inaccessible.

Most campgrounds along the Pioneer Mountains Scenic Byway will be available for use with limited services. Roads adjacent to the Scenic Byway may still be blocked with snow and downed trees. Travelers may reach the historic Canyon Creek charcoal kilns west of Melrose; however, Vipond Park is not fully accessible.

Call our Forest Service Offices either in Wisdom at (406) 689-3243, or Wise River at (406) 832-3178 for more information before heading out for your trip.

You Can Still Gain Tax Benefits from Charitable Donations

Like most people, you probably know several organizations worthy of your philanthropy, and you may well have contributed to them, perhaps on an annual basis. In the past, when you've made charitable donations, it's been a win-win: You were able to provide support to a worthy organization and you received some valuable tax benefits. But with the passage of the new tax laws, things may have changed considerably for many people. Are there still tax benefits to making a charitable donation?

Here's some background: Previously, you may have been able to deduct your charitable donations if you itemized deductions on your income tax return. So, for example, if you were in the 25 percent tax bracket and you gave $1,000 to a qualified charity, you may have been able to deduct $250.

But under the new tax laws, the standard deduction is almost doubled for 2018, to $24,000 for joint filers, and $12,000 for single filers. As a result, far fewer people are likely to itemize their deductions. If you're in this group, you may find that you have less incentive, at least for tax reasons, to make charitable gifts.

However, receiving a tax deduction is not the only tax benefit of making a charitable gift. If you own an IRA and you're 70 1/2 or older, you generally must start taking required minimum distributions, or RMDs – from your traditional IRA. (Roth IRAs are not subject to RMDs until after the death of the owner.) If instead of withdrawing the money, the IRA owner decides to transfer the funds directly to a qualified charity, the distributed amount can be excluded from the IRA owner's income. So, in effect, you can get a sizable tax benefit from your generosity. In fact, you may be able to move up to $100,000 from your IRA per year to an eligible charity and have it count as your RMDs, even if the amount donated is more than the required minimum withdrawal.

Even if you aren't 70 1/2 yet, you might still gain some tax benefits from certain types of charitable donations. When you itemized, and you donated appreciated stocks, you were generally allowed a charitable deduction for the full fair market value of the stocks on the date of the transfer, even if your original cost was only a fraction of that value. Now, if you don't itemize, that charitable contribution is not deductible, but you can still avoid the capital gains taxes you'd have to pay if you sold the securities, rather than donating them.

Finally, you could name a qualified charity as a beneficiary of your IRA or 401(k). This can allow the assets to pass free of income tax to the charitable group.

Given the increased standard deduction resulting from the new tax laws, many charitable groups are worried about the potential loss of contributions. Nonetheless, as we've seen, you can still find ways to get some tax benefits from your own charitable gifts. And you'll still get the same satisfaction from supporting a good cause.

Benefits of Outdoor Exercise

We are finally enjoying more nice, warm, sunny days and fewer days with snow and rain. And although rain can be cleansing and refreshing, for me there is nothing like a clear sun-shiny day to lift my spirits and make me want to spend time outside!

For those without gym memberships, getting outside to exercise is a no-brainer. Many have walked in the mall or Civic Center during the inclement weather, and some, especially dog owners, may have braved the weather all winter long to help keep their favorite pets happy and healthy. All these exercisers are now ready to take their walks outside, or at least have a chance to enjoy good weather rather than endure the cold. The unpredictability of outdoor environments, like uneven surfaces and going up and down hill, have been factors that always make it more effective to perform our work-outs outside when possible. Even these subtle differences provide for a more challenging session. In addition, exercisers are more likely to stay outside longer than in the gym, probably because of the enjoyment factor.

There are many things, like weight lifting and exercise classes, that are still worth our trek to the gym. But if you are thinking of a walk or bike ride, recent studies illustrate that the benefits of performing those exercises out-of-doors are greater than that of indoor exercise. We have long known that sunshine lifts our spirits and helps with depression. Now we are discovering that nature has even more benefits.

In these recent studies, volunteers walked or cycled both indoors and outdoors and were put through a battery of tests following each episode. The volunteers reported enjoying the outside activity more and, on subsequent psychological tests, scored significantly higher on measures of vitality, enthusiasm, pleasure and self-esteem and lower on tension, depression and fatigue after they walked outside.

In addition, there is now evidence that trees have a very positive effect on us humans. It was first noted that patients whose hospital rooms looked out on trees had shorter recovery times than those that did not. When scientists moved people outside, to walk under or near the trees, the same measures of memory, attention and mood, improved even more. Not surprisingly, the greatest improvements were to people who were weary from a long, hard day and walked under trees afterwards. They were revitalized!

These scientific studies were limited to every-day types of exercise, but we can all imagine that taking ourselves to the mountains, lakes, and parks for hiking, swimming, boating and fishing around Montana could be even more beneficial. If you are not yet planning summer activities that take you to the Maude S and Thompson Park trails, or further out to mountain treks, campgrounds, and rivers, it is time to do so!

The further we immerse ourselves into the trees and waters so abundant in our nearby hills, lakes and mountains, the better it will be for our mental and physical health. It may be difficult some days to get to the gym and get a workout in. But we are always better off and happier once we have done so. Yet it is always a pleasure to prepare for a day trip or camping weekend as we know how much better off we are when out-of-doors.

You may not have needed scientific evidence to inspire you to get outside this summer, but now you have it. This is the perfect time to figure out how to make the most of our fabulous but short summer season. Once you are outside here or in the mountains, you can just relax and enjoy!

What's Cooking

By Debbie Sorensen

The garden report is that "my half-of-the-rhubarb" in the garden is flourishing. Today will be the first picking. I'm looking forward to having bread and cake baked by this evening. Next, will be muffins for sharing and then pie for a party.

As I'm rolling out pie dough, I'll be thinking of a wedding gift that I received 40 years ago from a dear neighbor. Selma Koski, lived several miles from our ranch, with her two bachelor brothers on a small farm on Little Belt Creek. Her life was hard as they had so little. With no phone, she would take off walking to visit the neighbors.

For our May wedding, Selma wrapped up a rolling pin in cheerful Christmas paper with string tied around the handles. Selma not only had a learning disability and a lumbering gait, but was hard of hearing, had a speech impediment and a loud voice. Selma also had a big heart and shared from her heart. She was an inspiration.

This recipe comes from my favorite brochure from the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Alaska, Rhubarb Recipes, Publication No. 64. Reprint July 1976

Rhubarb Custard Pie

Line 9 inch, pie pan with pastry.
Pour in: 4 chopped, fresh rhubarb, cut in 1/2" pieces.

Pour over rhubarb a mixture of:
4 T. flour 1 1/2 c. sugar
1/4 tsp. salt 2 beaten eggs
1/4 c. sour cream
Pinch freshly grated nutmeg

Cover with top crust. Crimp edges. Brush top crust with sour cream, sprinkle lightly with sugar.
Bake in 425° oven for 10 minutes. Lower heat to 350° and bake 45 minutes.

Memorial Day honors soldiers' sacrifice

By Paul Vang

This coming Monday is Memorial Day, the holiday established after the Civil War to honor fallen Union soldiers. It expanded to include the fatalities from World War I, and now honors the dead of all wars.

Memorial Day is different than Veterans Day, the November 11 holiday that honors all who served, living or dead. Many people wear poppies on Memorial Day, a custom going back to World War I, as poppies were among the first plants to grow and blossom on the bloody European battlefields. Poppies were the inspiration for a poem by Canadian soldier, John McCrae, "In Flanders Field." The poem begins, "In Flanders Field, the poppies blow/Between the crosses, row on row..."

Memorial Day is always a day I remember in connection with being in the high school band in my Minnesota hometown. We were always a part of the parade going down Main Street, on our way to the city cemetery, the final resting place of many Civil War veterans, as well as just about all adults from my childhood, and everybody in-between.

The parade included Scouts (both girls and boys), veterans groups, Gold Star mothers, and a convertible or two carrying the community's oldest veterans. When I was a kid that meant Spanish-American War veterans.

At the cemetery, the standard routine had high school students reciting "In Flanders Field," and Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Some politician, sometimes our congressman, would give an address. The ceremony ended with trumpeters playing Taps. The weather, more often than not, was hot and steamy, and it was a relief to get back to school where we could peel off our heavy all-wool uniforms. Typically, we'd already had high school graduation by then, so that when we were done, we were done for the school year and could begin summer vacation.

While Memorial Day officially honors those who died on our battlefields or from injuries incurred in battle, in recent years I've been tracking the dwindling numbers of the 16 million men and women who went to war during World War II.

Now, all those veterans are in their 90s or are centenarians. According to the Department of Veterans Affairs, there were around 558,000 still living as of September 2017, and they're dying at the rate of about 362 every day.

Of the 464 military personnel awarded the Medal of Honor, 266 posthumously, there are just four survivors, including Douglas Munro, the only member of the Coast Guard to ever receive the honor.

While Memorial Day honors the fallen from our wars, I note some notable World War II veterans, the last of that Greatest Generation, who are still with us. That list includes a few surprises, such as Moshe Arens, Israeli politician and diplomat, and Prince Michel of Bourbon-Parma, a French businessman and part of the long-deposed French royal family, both of whom served in the U.S. Army.

Other notable survivors include columnist Russell Baker, entertainer/civil rights leader Harry Belafonte, actor and comedian Mel Brooks, lawyer Benjamin Ferencz, who served in the Army, and became a prosecutor at the Nuremberg War Trials. He's the last living Nuremberg prosecutor. There are women in the ranks, including Rosemary Kuhlmann, an opera singer and Broadway actress, who served in the Navy, and Rosemary Rodgers, who was a WASP pilot for the Air Force.

Among athletes are baseball players, Red Schoendienst and Dodgers pitcher, Carl Erskine. Johnny Lujack, the 1947 Heisman Trophy winner and NFL coach, Marv Levy are among football players who served.

Leaders in public life include President Jimmy Carter, Senator Bob Dole, South Carolina governor and Senator Ernest Hollings, Minnesota congressman and governor Al Quie, and Secretary of State and Nobel Laureate Henry Kissinger.

Among the oldest survivors are Internal Revenue Commissioner under President Kennedy, Mortimer Caplan, and actor Kirk Douglas, both 101. As we enjoy this first holiday weekend of summer, or the last holiday weekend of winter, as it often is here in Montana, take time to remember the sacrifices of those who made the ultimate sacrifice in wartime, as well as those who survived and excelled in civilian life.

This Week In Labor History

"The country is governed for the richest, for the corporations, the bankers, the land speculators, and for the exploiters of labor... The majority of mankind is ground down by industrial oppression in order that the small remnant may live in ease."
- Helen Keller, American icon, IWW member, Social Justice Activist

Wednesday, May 23:

100,000 textile workers, including more than 10,000 children, strike in the Philadelphia area. Among the issues: 60-hour workweeks, including night hours, for the children. -1903
The Battle of Toledo begins today: a 5-day battle between 6,000 strikers at the Electric Auto-Lite company and 1,300 members of the Ohio National Guard who were sent to protect company profits. 2 strikers will be murdered and more than 200 will be injured. -1934
Labor folk singer/songwriter, labor organizer and proud IWW member Utah Phillips died. ("One of the most important songwriters to be found in North America." -Rolling Stone) Phillips loved spending time and performing in Butte; he co-wrote the song "Look for Me in Butte". -2008

Thursday, May 24:

Earth First and IWW organizers Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney were nearly killed by a pipe bomb in Oakland. Judi and Darryl had been successfully organizing timber workers into the IWW. The bomb was placed under the drivers seat of their car and set to explode when the car moved. Police arrived within seconds and immediately arrested the bloody victims before taking them to the hospital. Local police destroyed evidence. The FBI and the timber industry collaborated to manufacture the whole incident. Corporate timber feared "radical" environmentalists would unite with rank and file Unionized timber workers. -1990

2,300 members of the United Rubber Workers, on strike for 10 months against 5 Bridgestone-Firestone plants, agree to return to work without a contract. They had been fighting demands for 12-hour shifts and wages tied to productivity. -1995

Friday, May 25:

Philip Murray is born. He was founder and the first president of the United Steelworkers of America, and head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) from 1940 until his death in 1952. -1886
The 11-month Remington Rand strike begins. The strike spawned the "Mohawk Valley Formula," described by investigators as a corporate plan to discredit Union leaders, frighten the public with the threat of violence, employ thugs to beat up strikers, and other tactics. The National Labor Relations Board termed the formula "a battle plan for industrial war". -1936

Saturday, May 26:

Western Federation of Miners members strike for 8-hour day, Cripple Creek, Colo. The WFM was formed in Butte Montana, they were labeled "Radicals" by the capitalists because they supported such "radical" ideas as the 8-hour day, safe working conditions and fair pay. -1894
Ford Motor Co. security guards brutally attack Union organizers attempting to distribute literature outside the plant in Dearborn, Mich., in an event that was to become known as the "Battle of the Overpass." The guards tried to destroy any photos showing the bloody attack, but some survived and inspired the Pulitzer committee to establish a prize for photography. -1937

Sunday, May 27:

Golden Gate Bridge opens. Work began

January 5, 1933. Until February 17, 1937, there had been only one fatality, setting a new all-time record in a field where one man killed for every million dollars spent had been the norm. On February 17, 10 men lost their lives when a section of scaffold fell through the safety net. -1937
The U.S. Fishermen and Allied Workers Union merged with the ILWU. -1947

Monday, May 28:

The Ladies Shoe Binders Society formed in New York. -1835
30,000 workers in Rochester, N.Y., participate in a General Strike in support of municipal workers who had been fired for forming a Union. -1946

Tuesday, May 29:

The United Mine Workers (UMWA) and the U.S. government signed a pact establishing one of America's first Union medical and pension plan. The UMWA Welfare and Retirement Fund permanently changed health care delivery in U.S. coal fields. The Fund was used to build 8 hospitals in Appalachia. It also established many clinics and recruited doctors to practice in rural coal field areas. -1946

The United Farm Workers of America reaches agreement with Bruce Church Inc. ending a 17-year-long boycott. The pact raised wages, provided company-paid health benefits to workers and their families, created a seniority system to deal with seasonal layoffs and recalls, and established a pesticide monitoring system. -1996

TIM DICK

DISTRICT JUDGE

Since 1999, I have represented 100's of individuals from all walks of life in civil disputes of all kinds as well as criminal matters. I have been a practicing member of the Butte Family Drug Court since its inception in 2004. Throughout my career, I have represented the legal interests of abused and neglected children, those cases are one of the fastest growing areas of concern for the District Court.

Thank you for your consideration.
