Council approves single road maintenance district

By Robin Jordan

Butte-Silver Bow's council of commissioners passed a new ordinance 6-3 last week that creates a single road maintenance district for the city-county and changes the way road maintenance fees are assessed.

The ordinance eliminates the four old street-maintenance districts, which only encompassed some of the roads Butte-Silver Bow maintains. In the old maintenance districts, fees were assessed based on the linear footage of the property adjacent to the street or road.

Under the new ordinance, each parcel in the single maintenance district will be assessed a flat fee. As outlined in the ordinance, each August, the public works department must provide the council of commissioners with an estimate of the cost of street maintenance for the fiscal year. The council then has to pass a resolution "specifying the equal assessment option and levying and assessing with an amount equal to not less than 75 percent of the entire cost of the street maintenance work."

The fee for this year has not yet been set and there will be at least one public hearing before commissioners pass a resolution.

Voting on the ordinance was nearly postponed at the meeting Wednesday, Aug. 1 when Chief Executive Dave Palmer said there were four late written objections from residents that commissioners might not have seen. He suggested sending the ordinance back to the judiciary committee for more discussion.

However, Finance and Budget Director Danette Gleason told the council that the budget schedule was tight, and special meetings might need to be scheduled if they did not vote on the ordinance that night. She said her department needs adequate time for testing before the individual tax bills can be prepared to send out for printing. Then, the bills have to be mailed in time so that property owners receive them by November 1.

Commissioner John Morgan also noted that two of the four citizen letters were from one individual who sent his comments in emails to all commissioners. Commissioners agreed to take a brief recess to read the other comments before resuming discussion.

Several commissioners who support the ordinance said that the council has been discussing how to increase funding for road maintenance for years and has been considering creation of a single maintenance district for about 18 months. They acknowledged that while the new system may not be a cure-all for Butte's road woes, it will make a difference in the ever-growing backlog of maintenance work.

Not all commissioners agreed. Commissioner Cindi Shaw said many of her constituents don't agree that the flat per-parcel method of assessment is fair to all taxpayers.

She said she thinks that the county should wait to change the road maintenance method until a new public works director, who may have other ideas, is hired.

Morgan said even if a new public works director is hired, road maintenance in the county is still underfunded.

Commissioners Morgan, Jim Fisher, Dan Foley, Dan Olsen, Dan Callahan and Brendan McDonough voted to pass the ordinance. Commissioners Shaw, Shawn Fredrickson and Bill Andersen voted against it. Commissioners Bud Walker and John Sorich were absent. Commissioner Sheryl Ralph has resigned from the council to take a job in Arizona and her replacement has not yet been chosen.

Community creek design workshops coming Aug. 30

On Thursday August 30th, Butte-Silver Bow, Atlantic Richfield, the State of Montana Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ), and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will hold community design workshops concentrating on future use in the upper Silver Bow Creek, Silver Bow Creek, and Blacktail Creek corridors. The workshops will be held at Butte Brewery conference space at Noon and 6 p.m.

The community design workshops are a continuing conversation about final land use in the project areas known as Northside Tailings, Diggings East, Buffalo Gulch, Blacktail Creek and the Butte Reduction Works.

The meeting structure will be informal, with most of the conversation taking place in facilitated small working groups. Attendees will be asked to consider the corridor as it is now and how they may like to use the area in the future. The event is family-friendly and will incorporate children's perspectives through age-appropriate activities.

Facilitation will be provided by Butte-Silver Bow and representatives of the technical teams responsible for engineering and design of the clean-up project for the corridor. Representatives from Atlantic Richfield, Montana Department of Environmental Quality and the Environmental Protection Agency will be in attendance to address questions.

For more information about this workshop, please contact Julia Crain, Butte-Silver Bow Special Projects Planner, at jcrain@bsb.mt.gov or 406.497.6264.

Whenever he didn't have a good comeback – which was usually – my friend Joe Nowakowski would feign anger and say, “Your face.”

Sometimes in text messages, Joe would shorten it to just “Face.”

I loved seeing that message or hearing those words because I knew I had just won our latest exchange.

Joe almost seemed to enjoy being on the losing end. Judging by his smile, I honestly believe he liked to be the butt of the joke.

Really, why else would a man decorate his arms with tattoos of flowers?

Why else would a man freely admit that the T-shirt he was wearing actually belonged to his mom?

Joe was the page designer at the newspaper, and I was a writer. We sat across from each other where we could always see each other's face. Joe made the nights when we would spend 8 hours staring at the computer seem worth it.

He worked the same nights as I did, and I thoroughly enjoyed every single one of them. We had so much fun and I was heartbroken when Joe left the paper to take a job elsewhere as a process server, where he was as out of place as a Bears fan at Lambeau Field.

I would still see or text with Joe a lot, and we would constantly give each other guff. I'd say that I won about 80 percent of the exchanges. Just when I would feel like a bully for teasing him too much, Joe would fire out a line that really roasted me.

“Your face,” is all I could answer.

Paul Panisko liked teasing Joe, too, and Joe gave him some good ammunition.

A few months after he first met him, Joe called me to ask for Paul's number.

Joe just bought a motorcycle, and he did not yet have his motorcycle endorsement on his driver's license. He wanted to ask Paul, who had an endorsement, if he would drive his new bike to his house for him.

“Just drive it,” I said. “No cop is going to give you a ticket, and even if he did, it wouldn't be as bad as the ration of (stuff) you're going to get from Panisko. He will never let you live it down. Never.”

It felt like I was Ferris Bueller telling Cameron Frye, “No, no, you don't want this much heat.” Panisko is brutally quick and funny. Joe asked him anyway.

Joe was the ultimate law-abiding citizen. He didn't put those wheels on the street until it was 100 percent legal. Panisko was more than happy to drive the bike to Joe's house, and even happier to have the ammo.

He mocked him mercilessly about it for the next 8 years.

If Joe didn't enjoy being the butt of the joke, he would have driven or even walked the bike home before he asked Paul to drive it for him.

If Joe didn't enjoy being the butt of the joke, why would he have told me the following story?

One day, Joe was driving up to work during Evel Knievel Days, and a real motorcycle rider pulled up next to him.

Now, when Joe rode his motorcycle, which was a street bike, he dressed the part all the way. He wore leather pants, a leather coat, leather gloves and a helmet that covered his face.

Everything matched his bike, so he almost looked like he was a professional racer.

The guy who pulled up next to Joe was wearing a bandana on his head and a jacket that looked like he belonged to a biker gang.

The guy looked Joe up and down a couple of times at the stoplight. Finally, the guy said, “You look like a Power Ranger.”

Joe didn't say anything to the guy, but I bet Joe muttered “Your face” under his breath. That's what he said to me repeatedly as I laughed for a solid hour and a half when he told me the story.

Those stories and so many more have been bouncing around my mind since last Thursday. That's when I heard the news that Joe took his own life.

Joe really was one of the good guys. He was a terrific father and a great friend. Even though he moved to Helena a while back, I know that if I would have called him in need he would be standing by my side in a matter of minutes.

As much as I loved ribbing Joe, I loved it more when we had our deep conversations. He was as smart, carrying and funny as any person I have ever known. He was one of the best friends I ever had.

To me, Joe was like family. I am going to miss him so much that it physically hurts right now. I just want to grab him by the shirt and say, “Say it ain't so, Joe,” like the young boy supposedly said to “Shoeless” Joe Jackson.

Sai it aint so, Joe. For the love of God, say it ain't so.

Joe never seemed like a guy who would take his own life. But, really, who does? Depression is a nasty disease that is too easily hidden.

If you're battling it, like most of us are at some point, make sure you talk to someone. Talk to anyone. It's OK. Everyone will understand. We've all been there.

Tell a story about some of your friends. That one little happy tale will almost definitely be enough to get you through the night.

I know telling stories about Joe has helped get me through these last few days.

I like to tell about the time Joe missed his chance to shake hands with Ken Griffey Jr., his all-time favorite athlete.

Panisko, Blake Hempstead, Joe and I had press passes to cover Rob Johnson with the Mariners in their first home series of the 2010 season against the A's.

We had all access at Safeco Field. We were in the dugout or standing in foul territory during batting practice. We were in the clubhouse talking to players.

A year earlier, we started to establish a bit of a relationship with Griffey. By the last night we were there in April 2010, Griffey started talking to us like we were friends.

Before the future Hall of Famer left the locker room that night, he initiated a handshake with us and wished us well as he left took off.

Joe missed it all because he left that game in the seventh inning to go see about a girl. I teased him that he was like Robin Williams in the movie “Good Will Hunting,” but I didn't put up a fight when he said he was leaving.

Missing out on a great baseball moment, however, didn't work out as well with Joe as it did in the movie. He met up with a girl he knew from college, but, to use a baseball metaphor, Joe struck out.

At least that's what he told us. Who knows, maybe the night really did go well for Joe. He might have just told us otherwise because he so enjoyed being the butt of the joke.

As we mocked him the whole way home from Seattle, Joe just sat and smiled.

His only defense was, “Your face.”

Back-to-school time on Butte road woes

By Robin Jordan

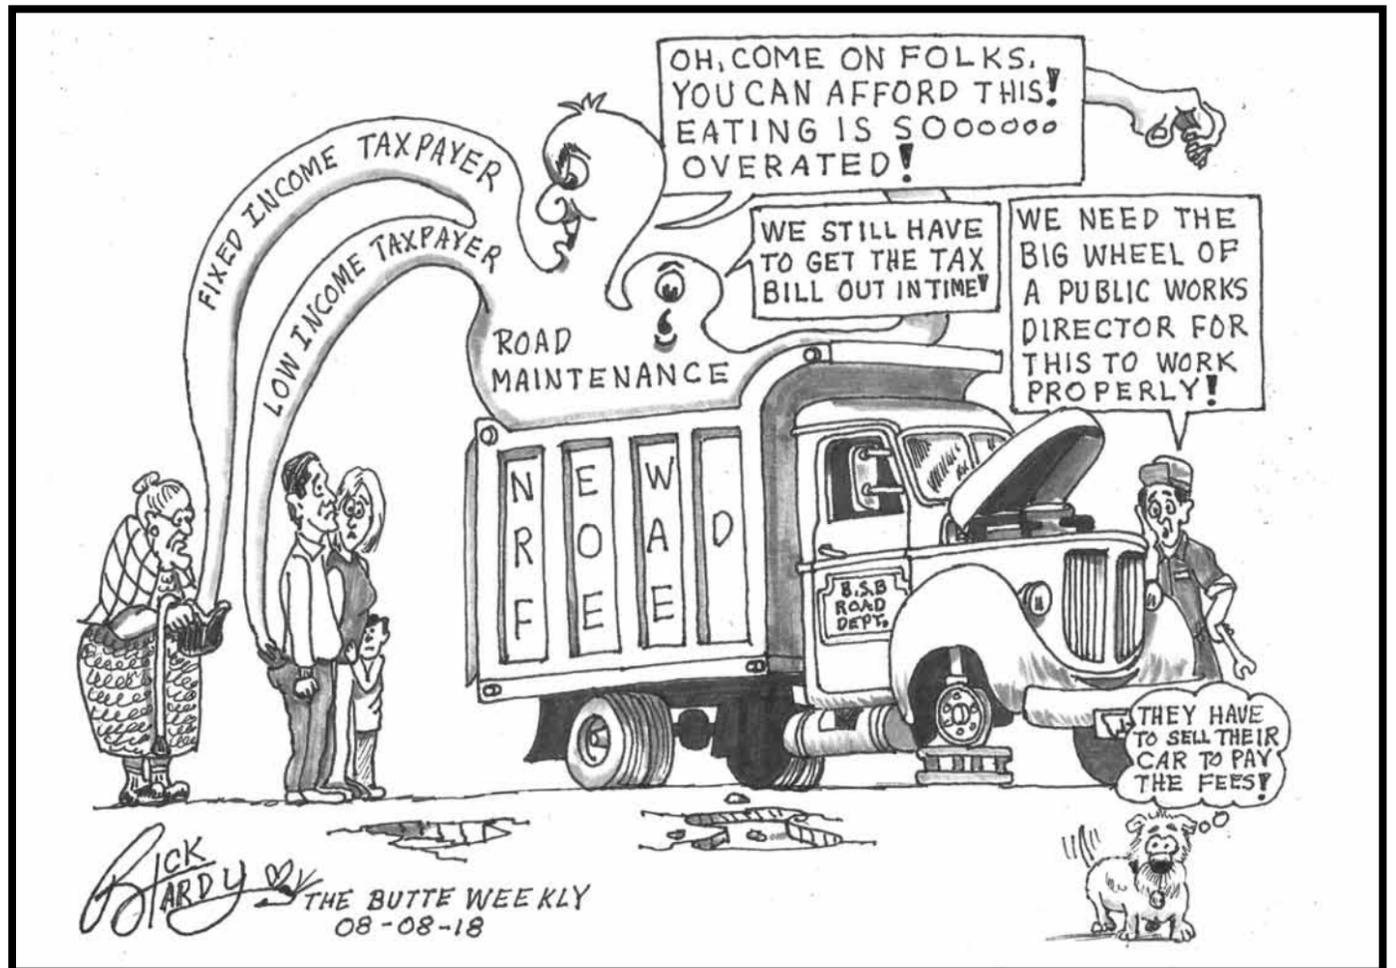

Last week, Butte-Silver Bow commissioners passed an ordinance that creates a single road maintenance district for the city-county, eliminating and replacing the four antiquated road maintenance districts, and setting up the mechanism to charge property owners a flat, per-parcel fee on their tax bills.

Even the plan's staunchest supporters on the council knew that it would cause backlash from property owners, especially from those who multiple plots of land. But, as several commissioners argued, Butte's roads are in bad shape and getting worse because the county's road maintenance budget has been inadequate for many years.

The four old maintenance districts had not been revised since the 1970s. Because the community has grown outward from the old city limits and away from the uptown business district, many property owners were paying no road maintenance fees, while many in the old districts felt they were paying more than their share for the maintenance they received. In the old districts, property owners were charged based on the linear footage of their properties abutting the city streets, so those on corner properties bore a greater burden than their neighbors in the middle of city blocks. The fees charged had also not been revised since the 1970s, so the old districts were only generating about $550,000 a year—not near the $1.9 million officials say is the amount needed each year to pay for snow removal, sweeping, flushing and repairs ranging from filling potholes to resurfacing of roads.

The council first started looking seriously at the problem in the summer of 2015, according to our files. At that time, Public Works Director Dave Schultz suggested raising the fees in the four old districts and creating a rural maintenance district. At the same meeting, the late Dennis Henderson, who was the commissioner for one of the two rural districts, asked about the possibility of raising the local option tax on license plates or imposing a local gasoline tax instead as a way to raise road maintenance dollars. He was told that raising the local option tax would require approval of the voters and that the gas tax, which would be collected through the state, would require complicated administration by the local government and neither would bring in the amount of revenue needed.

So, predictably, both of Henderson's suggestions went by the wayside and in the spring of 2017, Chief Executive Dave Palmer broached the idea of a single road maintenance district. As budget discussions progressed that summer, the idea was postponed for later discussion because property taxes were going up, thanks in part to the voter-approved waterpark and the addition of several new county staff positions.

Now, after many months of discussion in committees, the single maintenance district ordinance has been passed. Commissioners still have to pass a resolution to set the flat fee and at least one public hearing must be held before it is passed.

Many property tax payers are upset about the flat, per-parcel fee, especially those who own more than one parcel. They point out that the fee is charged on every parcel valued at more than $5,000, whether it is a small, undeveloped lot or the site of a large housing development or a major retail outlet.

Commissioners admit that the single road district plan is only part of the solution for Butte's road maintenance woes. As much as they will hate the idea of going back to committees and giving serious consideration and homework to the ideas of raising the local option tax and/or the local gas tax, that would be the wise thing to do, from a tax-payer's point of view. If one or both of those options could be utilized, maybe the county could afford to keep the road maintenance fee from being so burdensome to low and fixed income taxpayers and more fairly distribute the cost of keeping the roads in decent shape.

Looking after His Base?

By George Waring

Enough data has been collected to allow pollsters to tell us that White Evangelical Christians and White Catholics were the heart of Trump's electoral base in 2016.

His nomination of Kavanaugh to replace Kennedy on the Supreme Court indicates the White House political advisers know this. Kavanaugh appears to be the Justice that may cast the deciding vote to overturn Roe v. Wade.

How does Trump's latest tax cut proposal serve to further solidify his popularity among these two all-important voting blocs? I ask that question given the fact that Trump's first tax cut law did nothing to materially aid these groups. Unless, that is, unless these two groups may be characterized as extremely wealthy people. And that's not the case. They are White middle class, a mixture of small business, wage workers, retirees, etc. Certainly, not many of them to be found among this nation's richest one-tenth of the most affluent one percent of the population.

What is Trump's latest tax cut proposal?

On July 31st, the New York Times editorial board characterized his proposal under the heading: 'Trump's Crony Capitalists Plot a New Heist.' The board wrote: "The Treasury secretary floats a plan to hand $100 billion in capital gains tax savings to his moneyed friends. It's almost certainly illegal."

The proposal is the brain child of Trump's Treasury Secretary, Steven Mnuchin. You may remember him from his scandal plagued confirmation hearing, when the story of how he became a billionaire was revealed by David Dayen's investigative reporting for The Intercept. Mnuchin had been an executive at Goldman Sachs, one of a number who were involved in a derivative dumping scheme that made his firm about $5 billion, leaving swindled buyers holding nothing but worthless mortgage investments. During his confirmation hearing, Senator Merkley of Oregon grilled him on that scheme and his forgetfulness. Mnuchin had forgotten to report $300 million in wealth hidden away from U.S. taxtion in the Cayman Islands.

The Mnuchin/Trump brand new tax cut proposal offers, in the Times' editorial board's phrasing, "an exciting plan to award an additional $100 billion tax cut to the richest Americans." What's exciting about Mnuchin's plan is that it would allow Wall Street investors to benefit greatly from inflation. When these investors' tax attorneys calculate their clients' capital gains tax bill next year, they would no longer determine how much a stock had gained by subtracting its selling price from its original purchase price. Instead, the tax attorneys would, according to the Times' board, "first adjust the purchase price to reflect what it would be in inflation-adjusted dollars."

Yes, the Times' folks admit, the Mnuchin proposal would benefit "middle-class Americans who own stocks, along with all those older Americans whose homes have appreciated in value over the decades. And, indeed, many middle-class Americans could wind up with a sliver of savings."

But, and there is a big But! It turns out that in the United States "not all investors are equal." According to "independent analyses," write the editorial board, "a whopping 97 percent of the savings from Mr. Mnuchin's plan would go to the highest 10 percent of income earners." That leaves three percent of the tax savings to the bottom 90% of income earners. And, I really do believe Trump's base of White Catholics and White Christian Evangelicals resides there. In the bottom.

Further, "independent analyses" reveals that two-thirds of all tax savings in the Mnuchin/Trump proposal goes to the wealthiest one-tenth of one percent of income earners. They would get $66 billion in tax savings next year.

The beauty of Mnuchin's proposal is that it doesn't need

SNAP program vital to protect vulnerable Montanans

In our state constitution, Montanans declare that all political power is vested in and derived from the people. That all government of right is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

For the good of the whole. Our Montana values bring us together under this contract with one another that we stand up for each other; that we are working together for the greater good of every person in the Last Best Place.

About 120,000 Montanans, more than 10% of our whole, rely on the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program for basic food needs. More than 70% of Montana participants live in a household with children; 30% are older adults or are living with a disability, and 4% are in working families. These are our neighbors; people struggling with underemployment; our aging population.

Right now, the Senate and the House are coming together in committee to reconcile two very different Farm Bills. In the Senate, where we are grateful for the leadership of Senators Daines and Tester, the Senate bill protects SNAP, maintaining this vital social safety net for families who are struggling. This bipartisan effort was widely supported with a vote of 86 - 11. In the House version, a request for increased bureaucratic requirements that intend to add accountability to a program that already requires these conditions be met in order to receive benefits not only threatens the basic health of Montanans but increases the cost of the program to the taxpayer. The House version penalizes those that have already paid into the system and now need to benefit from it due to many factors some of which are a disability or medical condition, seniors on a fixed income, and costly or unavailable childcare. SNAP already has work requirements, time limits, and eligibility thresholds that keep many food insecure Montanans in need of emergency food assistance from food banks like ours.

Across the State, SNAP adds value to multiple sectors. Twenty of our community Farmers Markets accept EBT as a form of payment, with a growing number of those participating in the Double SNAP Dollars program. SNAP brings more money into local economies and directly into the hands of our local producers. Grocery stores, markets, and c-stores in our rural communities rely on the revenues that SNAP purchases bring to employ workers and stay open. For every $1.00 of SNAP spent, $1.74 circulates in the local economy, which is good for everyone. But above all else, SNAP ensures that Montanans have food on the table so our kids can get to school nourished and ready to learn. So that veterans live in food security after coming home. So that our older neighbors can age in their own homes with dignity.

For the good of the whole. It matters to us when our neighbors struggle. We urge our elected officials in Washington to support a Farm Bill that keeps our social fabric intact. Stand up for the whole of Montana. Protect SNAP. Stacy Brown, Executive Director, Family Service Billings

Congressional approval! Mnuchin maintains that the Treasury Department has the power to "unilaterally redefine the term 'cost.'" That's just a regulatory matter.

The Base needn't ever learn their White Nationalist hero used his Executive Branch powers to further enrich himself and his family and his billionaire Cabinet at their expense. His Base rests oblivious, its Guardian protecting them from immigrants, Muslims and non-Whites. In July, The American Prospect

Even without his tax returns, it's fact that Trump benefited from cuts to the top individual rate, the corporate rate, and the pass-through rate. I'm planning a backyard activity with the folks seven years and younger in our family this week. We'll work together on "slinging the hash" before we spread out a blanket in the back yard and sit down to supper, served on tin plates with spoons. This time, it will be the kids preparing the meat and bacon. They will also bake the biscuits, squeeze lemons for lemonade and mix together a fruit cobbler. The plan is to produce some good old-time food and comradery. (There is a "plan B" available in case things get out of whack.)

While we won't have a campfire and guitar for serenading, we can make music around the fire pit. No one in the group plays the guitar – yet, but we are working on the harmonicas!! With several little mouth harps and plenty of enthusiasm, we're sure to have the neighborhood doggie choir tuning up with us. I'm not sure what unsuspecting folks in the area may think, but it could be interesting. It is highly likely that the honks and squeaks will produce some entertaining results. Looking forward to an evening that is note-worthy and "just right."

| 2 cloves garlic crushed                     | ½ c. water             |
| 8 oz. can tomato sauce                      | 2 c. crushed tomatoes  |
| ½ c. molasses                               | 2/3 c. brown sugar     |
| 1 ½ tsp. dry mustard                        | ¼ tsp. dry ginger      |
| 1 tsp. salt                                 | 3 T. cider vinegar     |
| 2 (15 oz.) cans kidney beans/undrained      |                        |
| 1 (15 oz.) can pinto beans/undrained        |                        |
| 1 (15 oz.) can butter, lima beans/undrained |                        |

Brown beef and bacon together. Drain off excess fat. Add onion and celery in heavy skillet, cooking until just tender. Add garlic, water, tomato sauce and crushed tomatoes, bring to boil. Add remaining ingredients and beans, stirring well. Bring to boil and reduce to a simmer. Cook slowly for one hour. Serve with a side of biscuits, fresh squeeze lemonade and apple or peach cobbler for dessert. Yield 6-8 servings

For Cast Iron skillet aficionados, utilize the spider-legged pans and campfires. You might even choose to spread a blanket outside and share the best of the west cowboy and pioneer stories.

How Can You Help Your Kids Pay for College?

It's still summer, but we're getting close to a new school year. One day, though, "back-to-school" will mean "off to college" for your children. Will you be financially prepared to help your kids cope with the costs of higher education?

Your first step, of course, is to know what you're up against, so here are some numbers: For the 2017-18 academic year, college costs (tuition, fees, room and board) were, on average, nearly $21,000 for in-state students at four-year, public schools and nearly $47,000 for students attending private colleges or universities, according to the College Board. And you can probably expect even bigger price tags in the years to come.

To help prepare for these costs, you might want to consider putting your money in a vehicle specifically designed to help build assets for college, such as a 529 education savings plan. All withdrawals from 529 plans are free from federal income taxes as long as the beneficiary you've named uses the money for qualified college, trade school or graduate school expenses. Withdrawals for expenses other than qualified education expenditures may be subject to federal, state and penalty taxes on the earnings portion of your plan. (However, tax issues for 529 savings plans can be complex, so please consult your tax advisor before investing.)

You can generally invest in the 529 savings plan offered by any state, but if you invest in your own state's plan, you may be able to claim a tax deduction or receive a tax credit.

By starting your 529 plan early, when your children are just a few years old, the investments within the plan have more time for potential growth. Plus, you can make smaller contributions each year, rather than come up with big lump sums later on.

A 529 plan is not the only education-savings tool you can use, but it has proven effective for many people. Yet you may also want to consider ways to keep college costs down in the first place. For one thing, your children may be eligible for various forms of financial aid. Some types of aid depend on your family's income, but others, such as merit-based scholarships, are open to everyone. But you don't have to wait until you get an offer from a school's financial aid office – you can explore some opportunities on your own. For example, many local and national civic and religious groups offer scholarships to promising young people, and your own employer may even provide some types of grants or assistance. Plus, your state also may offer other benefits, such as financial aid or scholarship funds. It can certainly take some digging to find these funding sources, but the effort can be worthwhile.

Here's another option for reducing college costs: Consider sending your child to a local community college for two years to get many of the "general" requirements out of the way before transferring to a four-year school for a bachelor's degree. Community colleges are typically quite affordable, and many of them offer high-quality programs.

A college degree is costly, but many people feel it's still a great investment in their children's future. And by taking the appropriate steps, you can help launch that investment.

Eat Better to Feel Better

Discussions about healthy eating and good nutrition seem most often to be tied in with weight control. While we all know these two things to be related, a more over-looked aspect of a healthier diet is the association with better physical and mental health. I was a bit surprised about the connection between mental health and better nutrition but there is scientific research to support the concept. Good nutrition matters.

Since the number of people with diabetes and prediabetes is now in epidemic proportions, this is certainly a good place to start. Everyone should be tested for prediabetes during their annual wellness checks and diet is paramount in controlling diabetes, as well as preventing diabetes. Staying away from processed foods and simple carbs (i.e. white stuff like flour, sugar and rice) and eating more fruits and vegetables and whole foods like whole grains and lean proteins can help keep sugar levels steady and in a healthy range.

The brain is one of the most metabolically active parts of the body. This means it requires a steady stream of nutrients to keep it healthy and to aid in prevention of dementia. For brain health, be sure to eat foods rich in choline, like soybeans, peanuts and eggs. An antioxidant rich diet is also beneficial so include foods rich in Vitamins A and C. Foods with Omega 3 fatty acids – think fish, walnuts and flax – are critical, as well as whole grains, like oatmeal, quinoa and brown rice, for ample amounts of B vitamins.

It turns out that good nutrition is also important for good mental health and that a healthy gut contributes to a healthy mind. Besides following the general principles of healthy eating, to be at your best mentally, start the day off with breakfast to prevent brain fog. Avoid sugary drinks and excess amounts of caffeine and drink plenty of water – the eight glasses per day is still a good recommendation. Avoiding high-fat dairy, fried, refined and sugary foods while including lots of produce will keep you at your mental best.

For a healthy gut, the addition of foods that contain probiotics help strengthen your gut microbiome and can make a big difference. Foods that are fermented naturally are a good choice. Look for the words 'naturally fermented' when buying pickles, kimchi (pickled Korean vegetables) the yogurt-like kefir drink and sauerkraut. Yogurt with live cultures and kombucha are also good choices and all of these can be made at home if you are ambitious, like to experiment and have patience.

The effects of inflammation in our bodies are generally harmful and can contribute to several chronic diseases. Arthritis, asthma, cancer, diabetes, heart disease and even mental issues can all be aggravated by inflammation. Alcohol, trans and hydrogenated fats, sugars (which have a variety of names on an ingredient list), processed foods and food additives like MSG and aspartame all contribute to inflammation.

Those of us who already have health issues or who struggle with our weight tend to be aware of many of the foods referred to above in either the 'to avoid' or 'to eat' categories. Sometimes those with naturally good health, body weight and numbers believe that it is not necessary for them to watch what they eat. While good genetics are certainly helpful, over time we can all become susceptible to disease.

Being aware of what we eat and keeping sugary and processed food and drinks at a minimum is a good place to start. Taking the foods you know are not the best out of your diet and having them only as occasional treats helps. If you look at what you eat and make even one change, it can make a difference. Think healthy and happy!

Message from the Mission

Butte Rescue Mission opens construction bids to four contractors

Four general contractors are submitting bids for construction of the Butte Rescue Mission's new Center of Hope campus on 1.6 acres in Butte's warehouse district. Bids are due on Friday, August 10. "We are so excited to finally be moving ahead at this capacity on the Center of Hope project," said Rocky Lyons, Executive Director for the Butte Rescue Mission. "We are looking forward to getting back to doing what we do best, which is feeding, sheltering and caring for the homeless, hungry and hurting in our community."

Project Architect Paul Blumenthal also looks forward to the Mission's new homeless shelter, which will open on October 8.

"For me," he said, "architecture is about beautiful spaces that people can live in, relax in, and find fellowship. My role with the Mission's shelter is to include all of that while maintaining their goals of helping and improving lives of people who are without a place to call home."

Major renovation on the campus' existing warehouse will begin once the modular housing units are open to feed and house the homeless. The warehouse—called "The Taproot," where real growth will come from—will include a 25-seat classroom, health clinic, chapel, laundry, computer lab and administrative offices. It will also provide programs and services to foster transformation from homeless to wholesome.

The Town Pump Charitable Foundation has donated a $200,000 matching grant to the Butte Rescue Mission. Direct contributions to the Mission's Building Fund may be made to First Montana Bank, 1940 Dewey Blvd., in Butte, or mailed to the Butte Rescue Mission, P.O. Box 3046, Butte, MT 59702. Please mark your donation "Building Fund". We can also take credit card donations over the phone at (406) 782-0925.

A rendering of the future home of the Butte Rescue Mission illustrates the two modular housing units for 56 men, women and children in its location in Butte's warehouse district. The Mission's new Center of Hope campus will be at 610 E. Platinum. The Mission urgently needs to secure a $200,000 community-matching grant from Town Pump Charitable Foundation before the shelter's target opening date on Oct. 8. For more information, call the Mission at (406) 782-0925. / Rendering by Project Architect Paul Blumenthal

Carousel Corner

By Mike Sawicki

IT'S SHOWTIME!!!

All staff, volunteers and board members are happy to report that the carousel is now open this past week. Business hours are Monday through Saturday 11 am to 4 pm and Sunday Noon to 4 pm. We have chosen to call this past week our "soft opening" allowing us the opportunity to examine our operations and get procedures organized. Plus, there is still quite a bit of construction at Stodden Park so anything we can do to minimize customer inconvenience is paramount. For example, on weekdays there are large dump trucks going to and fro past our front sidewalk. This means parking is difficult but don't worry, hardy Montanans can walk thru the occasional mud puddles knowing the fun of the carousel awaits!!

Hundreds of young and young at heart have ridden around in circles this past week. Hundreds of photos and videos have been taken. Hundreds of bags of popcorn have been enjoyed, both chocolate and caramel corn included. Hundreds of smiles, countless memories, endless recollected stories have been told. Everyone so far has been thrilled and pleased more than expected.

The Coaster Cafe provides tasty pizzas, pasties, soda pop, cotton candy, hot dogs, popcorn in three flavors, 16 flavors of ice cream, popcorn with extra butter (my favorite), coffee, Lemonade, ...basically the best foods around to celebrate a carousel experience.

Hey check out or Biplane Gift shop for t-shirts, postcards, retro candies, games and all sorts of fun and unique gifts. Hundreds of people have purchased mementos already. Carousel ride tickets are sold at the Biplane Cafe counter and just across the floor the Coaster Cafe will entice all with that wonderful smell of fresh popped popcorn. Right next to the Biplane Gift counter is our penny press machine. Hundreds of folks have acquired those curious bent pennies for souvenirs. The unusual penny press machine can imprint different images of the Spirit of Columbia Gardens Carousel as keepsakes which kids really seem to like.

Other areas of the building show off pictures and posters of the original Columbia Gardens. We have one of two surviving horses rescued from the 1973 fire on display. A childrens area is located in the west side where little kids can play on a carpeted floor and maybe even create their own music on the cajon drums painted by our artistic team.

Many visitors have marveled at the presence of two band organs. The oldest is a 1929 Wurlitzer saved believe it or not from the Columbia Gardens. The other organ is a Stinson, quite a bit newer and very loud!! Both organs need some work to be more functional and yet each is a work of art and certainly worth viewing.

Be sure to check out all the names on the Giving Tree. Individuals and businesses are listed along with volunteers, sponsors, donors and all who played instrumental roles starting the process of getting the carousel project off the ground along with actual construction tasks after the groundbreaking three years ago.

So tell all your friends and family members near and far that the SPIRIT OF COLUMBIA GARDENS IS OPEN. Every now and then a kink needs working out of course. Nonetheless we are booking birthday parties and even have a wedding scheduled in September!

The phone number is 406 494-7775. Donations can be made on the website: buttecarousel.com and on Facebook: Spirit of Columbia Gardens Carousel. Also, we are interviewing folks age 16 and above for all employment positions. So if you know anyone who wants to have fun while working, please have them call in!!

The Great Outdoors

Dillon author Robbins was a consummate outdoorsman

By Paul Vang

There was a big gathering of people in Dillon, the last Saturday in July. We were gathered to say goodbye to a consummate outdoorsman, Chuck Robbins.

Chuck Robbins truly lived an outdoors life, as an angler, upland bird hunter, big game hunter, fishing guide and, to put it all together, a prolific outdoor writer, with several books to his credit along with (probably) countless newspaper and magazine stories.

Chuck was a Pennsylvania native, and he grew up in the outdoors, fishing and hunting, and then as a fly-fishing guide with a prestigious Pennsylvania lodge, with clients as varied as former President Jimmy Carter and former Vice President Dick Cheney, when Cheney was Secretary of Defense under George H.W. Bush. While Chuck guided a number of well-known people, I also recall a conversation with Chuck talking fondly about a trip he'd just taken with a couple Wounded Warrior veterans.

Somewhere along the way, he took up the craft of writing about the outdoors, and had a prolific career as writer. In fact I met Chuck, and his wife Gale, at an outdoor writers conference.

While Chuck was well-established in Pennsylvania, the lure of Montana finally proved irresistible, and less than 20 years ago, Chuck and Gale pulled up stakes and moved to Dillon, Montana.

One might think it would take time to gain expertise about the Rocky Mountain West, but Chuck did it quickly, putting out a book on ing the new edition of his book.

Chuck and Gale were a team in the outdoors, with Gale an accomplished photographer and editor as well as life companion.

For several years, Chuck was the editor of a monthly newsletter for the membership of the Northwest Outdoor Writers Association (NOWA), and in recognition for this and other journalistic achievements, the Association recognized Chuck with the organizations' highest honor, the Enos Bradner Award, named after one of the Northwest's greatest outdoor writers, and one of the founders of NOWA.

Sadly, Chuck died, suddenly and unexpectedly, doing what he loved, at the oars of his drift boat, going down the Big Hole River on June 12. His customers attempted to revive him with CPR, but without success. Chuck was 73.

At Chuck's Celebration of Life, held appropriately at the Anderson & Platt Outfitters fly shop in Dillon, a number of friends and family spoke of their respect for Chuck. One person, a former client, said that Chuck knew every bird, every wildflower, and every animal along the river. His knowledge of nature was unsurpassed.

Another talked about Chuck and his love for his bird dogs, with his last dogs, Annie and Maggie, both German wirehair pointers, finding and retrieving his birds.

Those dogs, incidentally, provided their own share of adventure to Chuck and Gale's outings, with Annie surviving a rattlesnake bite while hunting, and Maggie falling into an abandoned mine shaft in the foothills near Dillon.

Chuck loved upland bird hunting and he had a special love for hunting, and eating, sage grouse. When winter came to Montana, Chuck and Gale often hooked up their trailer and headed for Arizona, where Chuck spent much of his time hunting quail in the Sonoran desert and mountains.

Chuck's friends talked about Chuck's love for our public lands and a recurring feature of Chuck's Facebook and blog posts were about public lands and keeping those lands accessible and open to the public. He was a fierce advocate for public lands.

Through Chuck's years of hunting and angling across much of the United States and several Canadian Provinces, and his skill as a writer, Chuck left his mark. Perhaps he wrote his own epitaph on his website, "Rantings and Ravings of an old man truly ruined by sport."

fishing the northern Rockies, and then a Flyfisher's Guide to Montana. His outdoors expertise wasn't just hunting and fishing, as he also put out Birding Trails Montana, a guide to birding. Just this spring, Chuck released a new edition of Flyfisher's Guide to Montana, and in May had a successful autograph party at The Bookstore in Dillon, launch-

Work on Milwaukee Railroad trestle scheduled this week

The Butte Ranger District and volunteers from AmeriCorps St. Louis will be working to install running planks on the Milwaukee Railroad trestle early this week.

The Milwaukee Railroad trestle is located in Thompson Park and is part of a 25-mile non-motorized trail system managed by the Forest Service and City-County of Butte-Silver Bow. Crews will be installing running planks on a portion of the trestle to provide a smoother running and biking surface for trail users. The planks were funded through a Recreation Trails Program grant administered by the Montana State Trails Program which receives its funding from the Federal Highway Trust Fund.

During the installation of the running planks full-size vehicles will use the Milwaukee Railroad to access the trestle from Sagebrush Flats and park near the trestle beginning Friday, August 3 and continuing through early next week. Trails users should be aware of the vehicles and workers on the Milwaukee Railroad trail in the morning and late afternoon. The trestle will remain open to the public during this time.
